Biddle Bars Arnold From Testifying on Labor Curbs

His Attack on Union Practices Recalled As Embarrassing To Administration

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, who caused embarrassment in some New Deal circles a few weeks ago by public denunciation of certain labor union practices, was revealed yesterday to have been denied permission by Attorney General Francis Biddle to testify on legislation aimed at curbing so-called labor "racketeering."

The revelation was made by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, at the close of his Judiciary Subcommittee hearings on bills under study in connection with a recent Supreme Court decision which held that the Federal anti-racketeering statute does not apply to union use of violence against truckers entering areas where union truckers operate under closed shop agreements.

Hobbs made public a letter from Biddle in which the Attorney General replied to the Congressman's request that the committee be permitted to avail itself of the "benefit" of Arnold's testimony on the measures.

Quotes Biddle's Letter

"In view of the fact that these are not departmental bills, and they involve controversial issues upon which Mr. Arnold has heretofore expressed himself, I should prefer not to have him appear before the committee in connection with them," Biddle wrote.

"As you know, I like to be as helpful to your committee as I can, and you, in turn have been very cooperative with the Department of Justice, but under the circumstances you will understand why I feel that I cannot accede to your present request."

Hobbs also made public his letter to Biddle in which he said that the subcommittee wished "to avail itself of the testimony of witnesses particularly well qualified to give us the fruits of their experience and expert knowledge . . ."

"It cannot be denied that Mr. Arnold possesses such qualifications with respect to these bills," Hobbs' letter continued. "Therefore, we are especially anxious to have him testify."

Accusation Recalled

On March 21, Arnold, appearing before the committee in connection with legislation to require registration of labor unions, charged organized labor with coercive and restrictive practices damaging to businessmen, farmers and consumers. Generally speaking, Arnold treated labor to criticism similar to that he also leveled against monopolistic practices of big corporations.

Organized labor protested bitterly against Arnold's testimony, and, at a press conference Biddle said he

Army, Marines Cut Physical Requirements

The Army and Marines loosened their physical standards yesterday in an effort to speed up induction of new men into the ranks.

Selective Service headquarters disclosed that a limited number of Class 1-B registrants—now deferred because of minor physical defects—will be called into the Army shortly after June 1. They will be assigned to noncombat duty, thus relieving others for combatant service.

Marine Corps headquarters announced that their physical standards have been changed to permit men from 63 to 74 inches in height to be accepted. This change adds 1 inch to the previous maximum height and takes an inch off the previous minimum requirement.

Applicants for the Marine Corps who are overweight will be accepted if there is a reasonable chance of their losing weight at recruit camp and if they can wear stock clothing sizes. Underweight men who weigh at least 125 pounds and are not more than 20 pounds under the age and weight standards also will be accepted. The age limit has been raised three years to permit acceptance of men 33 or less.

Army officials said that only a small number of Class 1-B men will be called for the present. The Army wants to try out the replacement of troops with such limited-service men before inducting many of the 800,000 in this group.

Airliner Carrying 18 Crashes in Flames Outside Salt Lake

Salt Lake City, May 1 (AP).—Police said tonight a plane, believed to be a United Airlines Mainliner, crashed into the mountainside just outside Salt Lake City limits.

The plane burst into flames.

Fire crews, police, sheriff's officers and an Army detachment from the Salt Lake air base went to the scene.

Chicago, (Saturday) May 2 (AP).—United Airlines main office announced early today a mainliner that crashed on a hill northeast of Salt Lake City carried 15 passengers, including two infants, and a crew of three.

The liner, Trip No. 4 to New York, left San Francisco at 6 p. m (P. W. T.) and the crash was reported to have occurred at about 11:10 p. m. Friday, the office said. The plane was due in Chicago at 8:28 a. m. (C. W. T.) today.

The United office said no information had been received immediately on details of the crash.

United Airlines office at Denver said the crew of the plane on trip four, believed to be involved in the crash, was Capt. Don Brown, First Officer Harold Miner and Stewardess Neva Cantwell, all of San Francisco.

94% Tax Upon Excess Profits Is Approved

Ways and Means Body Proposes Levy for All of U. S. Business

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday clamped a flat 94 per cent excess profits tax on all above-normal earnings of corporations during the war.

The President's call for profits taxation "to the utmost limit consistent with continued production" was answered by raising 4 per cent the flat rate recommended by staff experts.

But the committee balked at the Treasury's insistence on a war surtax of 10 per cent on top of the present 24 per cent corporate normal tax. Instead, it approved a 16 per cent surtax rate on companies earning more than $35,000 in lieu of the present 7 per cent surtax. It continued the existing 24 per cent normal tax.

Upshot was a combined 40 per cent tax on normal earnings (against 55 asked by the Treasury), and 94 per cent on all "excess." This last was 20 per cent higher than the top graduated excess profits tax rate originally recommended by Secretary Morgenthau and 15 per cent higher than the top rate in World War No. 1.

To Raise 2½ Billions

Yet committee experts estimated these combined new corporate taxes would raise only about two and a half billion dollars in additional revenue. The Treasury had set three billion as the corporate tax goal, which could only be reached by taking more than half of normal earnings, in addition to the bulk of all excess. This, by a substantial vote, the committee refused to do.

"You just can't get more than three billion new money from corporations without taking over the corporations," one member said. Presumably the 500 million odd dollars the committee fell short on the Treasury's corporate revenue goal, and later expected cuts in the three billion sought from individuals, will be met by a last minute committee drive for a sales tax.

All of the new rates, tentatively

First—Sweep Swinger.

Third—3hut Out

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—Regardless of what your mama's done told you tomorrow's 68th running of the Kentucky Derby is going to be a real hoss race. True, it has been a worrysome thing as far as the ups and downs of the eligibles have been concerned, but it all sums up to a wide open battle and, as they say on the backstretch, "that's what makes horse racing."

It will take a heap of stretching to keep tomorrow's field from being the largest since 19 horses chased War Admiral home in 1937. Tonight, 17 thoroughbreds are bedded down at Churchill Downs with visions of gold, glory and ripe apples dancing in their heads. Each and every one is as fit as hands make horses and ready to march on to the track to the strains of "My Old Kentucky Home."

The actual naming of the Derby field, through the entry box this morning, was practically routine. It was the group the experts had anticipated with one possible exception, Elwood Johnston's First Prize, a probable 200-1 shot who finished third here yesterday in ordinary company.

No Notable Scratches

All the big shots came in—Requested, Alsab, Devil Diver, Shut Out, Sun Again, Apache, With Regards, Valdina Orphan and Hollywood. The others, referred to in the pressbox this afternoon as the "second division," including Sweep Swinger, Fairy Manah, Dog Patch, First Fiddle, Sir War, Boot and Spur, Fair Call and the aforementioned First Prize.

The racing writers were still looking under the corner of their carpets trying to locate the favorite. Most line-makers dodged the issue by labeling Ben Whitaker's Requested and the Greentree entry

Nation's High Schools Urged To Remain Open All Summer

By Frank LeMay
Associated Press Staff Writer

Year around operation of America's 25,467 high schools—eliminating summer vacations—in a plan for full mobilization of education behind the war effort was urged yesterday by the United States Office of Education's wartime commission. Among the courses proposed for the summer was "aviation education."

A wide range of activity was recommended for "all types" of schools, meaning that thousands of elementary schools might also remain open during the summer, along with high schools—not for instruction of pupils but to render special community services.

"To America's schools," the commission said, "this summer comes not as a time for vacation but as an opportunity for pointing up their services toward certain basic objectives highlighted by the war needs of the armed forces and of war production.

"Every school system should consider how its personnel, plant and equipment may be used during the coming summer to contribute to war services and to provide war service training courses."

Attendance at the summer schools would not be compulsory for the Nation's 7,234,000 high school students, the Office of Education said, but any student wishing to attend probably

Paper Barred From Mails For Sedition

Editor of X-Ray Is Given Chance to Defend His Policy at Hearing on May 19

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Postmaster General Walker last night turned off The X-ray for reflecting the official propaganda of the enemies of the United States.

Court Asher, hard-mouthed, square-jawed publisher of this Hitler-helping little sheet, was notified that he may defend the publication at a hearing on his second class mailing franchise, if he wants to try, in Washington on May 19.

In the meantime, the postmaster at Muncie, Ind—where Asher pours his hatred of England, the President and the Jews into print every week—was instructed to admit no copies of The X-ray to the mail until postal solicitors here have looked them over for sedition.

Exposed by The Post

The nature of The X-Ray was fully disclosed in The Post on April 8, in one of a series of articles on the defeatist press.

What was said then was, with greater emphasis, reiterated by Attorney General Biddle in a formal letter, which was released by the Postmaster General in announcing his action against the paper.

As he said of Charles E. Coughlin's Social Justice on April 14 and of the Philadelphia Herold day before yesterday, Attorney General Biddle said the X-Ray "has engaged over a period of time in a sustained and systematic attack upon certain of our activities directly related to the war effort, as well as upon public morale generally."

Danger Amply Illustrated

The Attorney General then underlined his determination that this Nation shall be able to resist assaults from within, in these words:

"The danger of such a systematic attack has already been amply illustrated by the fate of other countries where the Axis utilized such an attack to prepare the way for military conquest."

As did the Coughlin magazine and the pro-Nazi Herold—both out of the mails pending final hearings—the Attorney General said the X-Ray paralleled "certain of the major themes broadcast by enemies of this Nation." He cites disparagement of the intentions and motives of Great Britain, attacks on the national Administration and its war policies, fomenting of racial hatred and blaming the war on bankers and on the American Government.

When Coughlin's Social Justice was declared "clearly seditious" April 14 and barred from the mails pending a final hearing now set for day after tomorrow, Attorney General Biddle directed the special grand jury on Axis agents to get to the bottom of the magazine's financing and control.

Progress Is Reported

This inquiry closed its second week yesterday, and the special prosecutors, William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N. (j. g.) and John T. M. Reddan reported "substantial progress," in their daily conference with the chief of the criminal division, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge.

During the day, the grand jurors heard the questioning of Alberta Ward, acting secretary-treasurer of Social Justice Publishing Company, and of the nominal editor, E. Perrin Schwartz. They were two of more than a dozen persons em-

Respite for India

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, May 1.—Free China, endangered as never before by a Japanese back-door thrust which has penetrated within 45 miles of her border, sent reinforcements streaming down the Burma Road today in a supreme attempt to stop the Japanese column raging through northeastern Burma.

Forging due north from captured, blazing Lashio, where the Mandalay railroad meets the twisting supply route through the mountains, the Japanese reached the vicinity of Hsenwi, 22 miles northeast of Lashio along the Burma Road.

The Chinese high command said tonight that the Chinese defenders were holding steadfast in the Hsenwi sector under heavy pressure, and that some of the southbound reinforcements already had reached Hsenwi from China's Yunnan Province.

Border Japs' Objective

There appeared no doubt, now, that the Japanese were going all out to reach China's Yunnan border, which is 45 miles east and 55 miles north of Hsenwi.

(For some time informed opinion has inclined to the belief that the Japanese drive through eastern Burma was aimed at China, rather than in preparation for a westward attack on India. At their present location in the Hsenwi area the Japanese not only are enveloping the actual Burma Road but are in a position to menace the new and incomplete India-China route to the north, the 2300-mile Assam-Sikang Road.

(Moreover, one Axis report today placed first on a list of possible Japanese moves a drive into China to menace Chungking, the free Chinese capital, itself.)

Far south of Lashio, isolated Chinese units in the Shan States area of Taunggyi and Lollem still were attacking in an effort to cut the extended Japanese supply lines and, a communique said, were inflicting heavy casualties.

To the west the Japanese frontal attack on Mandalay had progressed to a point 20 miles south of that city and fighting was proceeding in the vicinity of Kyaukse.

(New Delhi dispatches said that the Japanese had advanced northwest of Mandalay as well as northeast and that the song-famous city actually was in a salient.

3 From D. C. Area Awarded Cross for Valor in Philippines

Three Army officers from the Washington area have won the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in action in the Philippines, one of them posthumously, the War Department announced last night.

The names of the three—Brig. Gen. Spencer B. Akin of Charlottesville, Va., Brig. Gen. Hugh J. Casey of Washington and First Lieut. Olin G. King of Silver Spring, Md.—were on a roll of honor published in Official Communique No. 211, giving the complete list of D. S. C. awards during the Battle of the Philippines.

The award to Lieut King was posthumous, the communique noted, but gave no details as to the feat of heroism for which he won the Cross or the manner of his death.

Generals Akin and Casey are now in Australia. They left the Philippines with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and now are believed to be serving on his staff.

Akin was chief signal officer and Casey the chief engineer on MacArthur's staff in the Philippines. The acts of heroism for which the awards were made are not known here.

The communique disclosed that

56 officers and 44 enlisted men of the American Army and the Philippine Army have been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross—second only to the Congressional Medal of Honor in importance—for valor in the Philippines.

One other such award has been made to Lieut. John D. Bulkeley of

Hitler's Drive Plans Wrecked, Red Army Says

Soviet Recounts Foe's Losses; Nazi Battleship Listed Among 447 Sunk

By Eddy Gilmore

Kuibyshev, U. S. S. R., May 1.—The guns, the bombs and the bayonets of the Red army have punctured beyond repair Adolf Hitler's vaunted spring offensive plans, the Russians declared on this May Day in announcing an imposing list of new Soviet victories by land and sea to bear them out.

To the nation's workers and fighters Joseph Stalin broadcast a message of confidence, the army newspaper Red Star praised the armed forces for "converting into a fable" Hitler's early offensive preparations and the Moscow radio announced these victories for the Soviet arms:

The sinking of a German battleship—the first claimed thus far by the Russians—by the Red navy's Baltic fleet.

A total of 58,000 Germans killed or wounded and 248 enemy planes destroyed in April on the Leningrad front alone.

The Moscow communique tonight reported a 9000-ton German transport had been sunk in the Barents Sea and listed 38 Nazi aircraft destroyed yesterday against nine Soviet losses.

A supplement related that Soviet guerillas seized a number of villages behind the German lines in the Leningrad sector and that all enemy efforts to regain them had been repulsed. On the Kalinin front it reported 900 Germans killed in two days.

Hull Is Victor In Feud With Wallace Board

Roosevelt Will Issue Order to Clear Up Undercover Quarrel

By the Associated Press

The State Department yesterday won an apparent undercover jurisdictional contest with the Board of Economic Warfare headed by Vice President Wallace.

President Roosevelt said he planned an order making it clear that where the Nation's foreign affairs are concerned, the Department still is the boss.

The feud and its settlement were revealed at Mr. Roosevelt's regular Friday press conference. The order to be issued, he said, will clarify the executive order under which the BEW was created.

Under the new arrangement, the BEW will retain charge of the procurement of supplies from other nations, but all negotiations with those governments must go through the State Department.

Brought to Head by Hull

The behind-the-scenes quarrel apparently came to a head with the recent return to the Capital of Secretary of State Hull, after a long period of illness and recuperation. The Secretary has long been known as a zealous guardian of the rights and prerogatives of his department.

At the press conference today, Mr. Roosevelt conceded that he discussed the question with the Secretary yesterday. Apparently, the latter felt the BEW had invaded the domain of his department. Obviously Mr. Roosevelt agreed with him and his decision ended the controversy.

Mr. Roosevelt remarked yesterday that the State Department was in charge of the foreign affairs of the country, although some people in

Grim Twilight

By the Associated Press

London, May 1.—Hundreds of British planes swung across the Channel at twilight today in what coast observers called one of the war's greatest single thrusts against the Nazi-held continental coast.

Resumption of the massive British attacks followed a weather-enforced overnight break in the 9-day-old, round-the-clock offensive and came on the heels of neutral dispatches from Germany which some London quarters interpreted as hints that the Nazis were more than willing to call off their aerial duel with Britain now, but which brought only an expression of scorn from an authoritative source here.

The gray cliffs of northern France were clearly visible to watchers on this side as the late day raiders, flying at altitudes between 20,000 and 30,000 feet, filled the sky between Calais and Dungeness, Kent.

Eight Fighters Lost

The air ministry said eight British fighters were missing in the day's operations and that one German plane was destroyed.

The late afternoon attacks, carried out by fighter-escorted Boston (Douglas) bombers and bomb-carrying Hurricanes, were made on the station and railway yards at St. Omer, Calais, and other targets.

Commenting on the reported Nazi willingness to call quits in the aerial war, one informant gave this British response:

"We are going after those blighters wherever they are and at every chance we get, and that is final."

He referred specifically to a Berlin dispatch which said:

"It is semiofficially stated here that Germany will call off the bombing of English towns if the

Carolina's 'Chute Landing Scare Remains Unsolved

New Bern, N. C., May 1 (AP).—The reported landing of two or three unidentified parachutists in the swamps near Bayboro, N. C., today, remained unsolved tonight as one military source reported that two 'chutists had been rounded up while other sources said the story was false.

The military source which claimed two men had landed in parachutes near the coastal town would give no further details and did not state where they were supposed to come from. Bayboro, however, is only a short distance from a new Marine air base at Cherry Point, N. C., and only 120 miles from Norfolk, Va., site of a large naval air base.

The search for the reported parachutists was begun this afternoon after two boys reported that they had seen three men plummeting down to earth near where they were.

Plans Shelved to Register Women for War Plant Jobs

President Roosevelt yesterday announced abandonment for the present of plans to register women for war production jobs.

The President told his press conference that women's registration was being deferred because surveys indicated more women are already available for industrial war work than there are openings.

He cited a report by Man Power Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, based on surveys by feminine members of the Social Security Board's Federal Advisory Council, indicating almost 1,500,000 women are now registered with the 1500 local offices of the United States Employment Service. Services of a large proportion of them are available to the war production machine.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized, however, that general registration of women for war production tasks might be necessary in the future as the drain on man power becomes heavier.

The President said McNutt had advised him pre-employment training programs for women were being expanded steadily in preparation for large-scale introduction of women in war industries.

He agreed with a recommendation by McNutt and the Advisory Council that State laws governing working conditions of women should be preserved.

250 Are Killed

Big Explosive Plant Blown Up in Belgium

By the Associated Press

London, May 1.—A tremendous explosion has wiped out the German-controlled gas and explosives factory at Tessenderloo in seething North Belgium, killed 250 persons and injured upward of 1000, advices from the Nazi-occupied nation disclosed today.

The blast occurred in an industrial and mining area where sabotage has been rife, and the impression was strong in London that the secretly-armed Belgium "White Brigade," a band of patriots which is preparing for the day when they can assist Allied invasion of the Low Countries, had now struck a hard blow at the conqueror.

The German army was in complete charge at Tessenderloo, and the German account of the blast, distributed by the Berlin radio, said cryptically that "the cause of the disaster, which has not been ascertained, is the subject of an inquiry."

Communists Being Deported

But later in the day the German radio reported that 100 "Communists" were being deported from Belgium to the East for fomenting sabotage in factories and elsewhere and for causing strikes.

The blast occurred at 11:30 a. m. Wednesday. Free Belgian sources here said the factory involved was that of the Society Anonmy des Produits Chimiques.

Berlin said it was "completely destroyed" and added:

"This factory produces artificial manures of various kinds and washing preparations for the Belgian market only.

"The devastating explosion extended over a radius of several hundred yards."

Nazi Official at Scene

Three hundred of the injured were said to be in hospitals. The head of the German military administration in the Belgian-northern French zone was personally on the scene.

In contrast to the German description of the factory, the Free Belgian news agency said it was equipped with modern machinery and compressor batteries for manufacturing sulphuric acid, synthetic ammonia and nitric acid for explosives and gas.

Before the invasion of Belgium it had about 1000 workers. The Germans have increased the production.

Dictators' Hopes For Early Peace Gone, Experts Believe

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, May 1.—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini were reported tonight to have dwelt in the main during two days of conference at Salzburg on measures for increasing the number of effective Axis troops in the Russian front and on rigid enforcement of home discipline both in Germany and Italy.

They also were believed by competent diplomatic analysts to have given up any hope of negotiating a peace this spring, after three weeks of unofficial overtures.

Axis communiques today disclosed the bare facts of the dictators' eleventh meeting Wednesday and Thursday, and Axis commentators said, as usual, that it was a preface to "great political and military events" early this summer.

Contrary to expectations, the Japanese Ambassador to Berlin, Lieut. Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, was not on hand, and it was noted that official German accounts of the meeting spoke of "the uniform war plan of the Axis and beyond that of the tripartite pact powers," and of the "hard determination of Germany and Italy and their allies to render final victory secure"—(as though Japan was a separate entity in the totalitarian strategy).

Most Important Conference

It was believed, however, that Oshima might meet Hitler and Mussolini in the near future for a detailed discussion of Axis war efforts. Foreign military observers here thought this would involve an effort to get Japan into the war against Russia by summer.

Behind the familiar Axis communique curtain, decorated with such phrases as the one that "a perfect accord of views" had been reached at the meetings "on the further conduct of the war by the two nations in both political and military spheres," qualified observers saw evidences that the Salzburg conference ranked as probably the most important that Hitler and Mussolini ever had.

This, it was pointed out, is the first time they have come together after publicly alluding to the sharp need for greater discipline and morale on the home front. Hitler, in his last speech, warned the German people he would enforce that discipline. Mussolini has removed a considerable number of party officials for failure to maintain wartime morale; tomorrow he will go before his council of ministers to report on the necessity for greatly increasing the war effort.

In the matter of military numbers the Axis position is regarded as even more serious than disaffection at home, to whatever degree the latter may exist.

Reserves Not Strong

Hitler has told the Germans how close the German army came to disaster in the winter. Reserve divisions, intended for spring, were thrown into the Russian battle in January. Far fewer new divisions than expected enrolled in Germany, Italy and especially in the Balkan countries. Bulgaria, for instance, provided but three or four divisions, instead of 10 expected, and these were sent to Serbia to relieve German units.

The war or nerves over the possibility of Allied invasion in the West is keeping more divisions along the Atlantic coast than otherwise would be needed.

On the Axis home front, rumors of a sweeping political change in Italy and of a possible purge in Germany have been heard here since Hitler's Sunday speech.

These no doubt have been exaggerated. But both the German and Italian press have made it clear that a tightening of party and civilian discipline is necessary and that a tremendous military problem exists in carrying on the fight against Russia through another year.

More frequently than before, Axis dispatches tell of persons imprisoned or executed for hoarding, violating food restrictions and, in some cases, sabotage.

All this seems to add up, for the present at least, to a situation of war nerves and regression of enthusiasm in the Axis nations.

Vast Force Renews R. A. F. Offensive

R. A. F. will change its methods of bombing German cities. The present bombing duel is highly unpopular with the German people."

As to the so-called "Guide Book Blitz" by the Nazis—that directed at the historic points of England—Home Secretary Herbert Morrison issued a challenge in the Shakespearean spirit of "Lay on MacDuff and damned be him that first cries: Hold, enough."

Speaking at Shoreditch, the minister declared:

"We aren't going to be bamboozled. Bombing by the R. A. F. will go through to the end with 100 per cent strength."

The only way the German people could stop the British aerial offensive, Morrison went on, would be to overthrow their government and he added:

"If they won't do it, we will do it for them."

The air ministry issued photographic evidence of the extent of damage left in the Nazi Heinkel warplane plants at Rostock—the Baltic city which was pounded four nights in a row.

"The main output of this factory for some time to come will be salvage, not aircraft," the ministry stated. "And this probably was the only Heinkel factory in north Germany where assembly work could be done."

The name of the battleship reported sunk or the date of its destruction was not given. (At last accounts Germany had three battleships, two building and two pocket battlehips.)

Soviet airmen and antiaircraft gunners of the Baltic fleet were credited with having downed 721 enemy planes.

Red Star tauntingly recalled that in the past German spring drives already were under way by May 1 and pointed to the lack of grand scale operations now.

It added that no doubt the Germans are intending an offensive sometime but that so far as any spring thrust is concerned it is only a myth.

The most pronounced activity at the moment appeared to be on the Central Front where the Soviet information bureau reported 300 Germans killed, two tanks destroyed and prisoners and trophies captured by Soviet units repelling enemy attacks.

Greatest of All Naval Battles May Break in Pacific Soon

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THREE POSSIBLE ATTACKS—This map indicates the three main directions in which Washington observers yesterday foresaw possible Jap thrusts against the American supply line to Australia. All of these bases protect the supply route, the general direction of which is indicated by dotted arrow

By John M. Hightower

Associated Press Staff Writer

The war in the Pacific apparently is approaching a period of intense naval and land action among the islands southwest of Hawaii, well-qualified authorities said yesterday, with the security of the Allied supply route to Australia as the prize at stake.

A strong Japanese attack against one or more sections of the island chain guarding this extended lifeline probably is imminent, it was added, and the ensuing action, if this develops as experts expect, is almost certain to produce the greatest naval battles of the war to date.

At the same time, these experts said, it may very well give American forces holding scores of island bastions from Hawaii to New Zealand their first full-scale experience of the kind of amphibious warfare in which the Japanese proved so proficient in their China Sea campaign.

An attack on the United States-Australian supply line had long been regarded in informed quarters here as one of the two methods by which the enemy might try to eliminate the continent down-under as an increasingly powerful Allied threat to his hold on the South China Sea.

Australia Attack Unlikely

The other method is an all-out attack on Australia itself. That apparently has passed from the realm of probabilities, at least for the present, since Gen. Douglas MacArthur's air forces have blasted possible Jap invasion bases with devastating effect.

Actual developments of a Japanese strategy of blockade first was clearly indicated this week when reports from Australia stated that a considerable force of ships and men was being concentrated in the mandated island area where the enemy has been building up naval and air bases for several years.

This force was understood to be gathering in the Marshall Islands, center of which is Jaluit—2096 miles from Pearl Harbor, 1540 miles from Samoa, and about 1500 miles from New Caledonia. The actual direction of attack, therefore, might be against any one of three vital points guarding the route or possibly against all of them and others in between.

In any such campaign the Japanese, despite their numerous losses in overrunning the Philippines, HongKong, Malaya-Singapore and the Dutch East Indies, would be able to bring up a tremendous force. Although about 220 Jap ships of all types have been sunk or damaged, their main fleet strength is believed hardly to have been touched.

Recent Allied Moves

Preliminaries of a life-and-death struggle to keep open the route to Australia have not been onesided by any means. Recent moves by the Allied high command have made this record:

1. A separate naval command has been ordered set up in New Zealand under Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, recently American naval observer in London. Functioning under the general supervision of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific Fleet commander, Ghormley apparently will have direct charge of operations in a large section of the south central Pacific.

2. United States troops moved into New Caledonia to assist the Free French forces in protecting their island against Japanese aggression. Loss of New Caledonia to the enemy would give him an excellently located base from which to slash at shipping between New Zealand and Australia.

3. A task force of at least one United States aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers, was reported two months ago to have ventured west of the Gilbert Islands—deep in Jap-dominated waters—probably scouting the enemy and seeking his ships to destroy. This was the force attacked by 18 Japanese bombers, 16 of which were shot down.

4. As long ago as January 31 a United States task force raided Japanese bases in the Marshall and Gilbert Islands, destroying ships and land installations in an effort to secure the flank of the supply line which those bases threatened.

De Gaulle Gets U. S. Support, But Only as Fighting Force

By Wilfrid Fleisher

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The United States regards Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Free French National Committee in London as representative of French military resistance wherever it exists but the question of American recognition of the De Gaulle committee as the national government of France has never arisen, it was authoritatively asserted here yesterday.

The closest cooperation exists between the United States and the De Gaullists and will continue to be maintained for the common purpose of winning the war, it was stressed. But it is felt here that the objective of the De Gaullists should be to fight for freedom until victory has been achieved and the French people are given an opportunity to select a government of their own free choice. Any attempt by General de Gaulle to give his committee a political complexion would be likely to jeopardize the existing support given to his movement, it was indicated.

American policy toward the De Gaullist movement was clarified for the first time yesterday following a meeting between Adrien Tixier, De Gaullist representative in Washington, and Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday morning when they discussed the relationship of the United States to the Free French movement.

It was clearly indicated that General de Gaulle should refrain from any attempt to make of his committee a government of France if he wants to continue to receive from the United States and also from Great Britain the support he has been getting in the past and which has consisted of lease-lend aid from this country, dispatched through the intermediation of the British, and of armed American assistance in French colonial territories under De Gaullist administration.

It is understood the Free French committee has made no official bid for its recognition as a government by the United States, but a speech of General de Gaulle's on April 1 this year, in which he demanded outright recognition by the united democracies that the real France is the France of London and not of Vichy, gave rise to the belief here that he was hankering for recognition by the United States and the other United Nations.

Yesterday's clarification of policy is understood to have been made in response to a De Gaullist inquiry as to the attitude of the United States toward General de Gaulle as the head of Free Frenchmen.

Allies Rake 30 Jap Planes At New Guinea

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 1.—Allied airmen swept down on an enemy airdrome at Lae in New Guinea yesterday, bombed and machine-gunned 30 planes lined up on the ground in a surprise attack and roared off after starting numerous large fires, a communique announced today.

In another raid on Salamaua, 20 miles to the south, other Allied bombers shot down three Japanese defending planes, and then unloaded their explosives on ground installations.

Allied losses were described as slight in the communique from General MacArthur's headquarters. It mentioned no opposition by the Japanese at Lae, indicating the raiders found the Japanese unprepared, despite almost daily Allied raids on the area.

Eight Japanese bombers raided Horn Island off Cape York at the northeast tip of Australia with little damage, while another Japanese formation raided Tulagi in the Solomon Islands "without effect," the communique said.

On the Philippine sector, three Japanese planes were shot down in a renewal of the attack on Corregidor by air and land forces and two others were damaged. There were 12 aerial raids, accompanied by heavy shelling. The defenders' fire hit Japanese batteries, truck columns and supply dumps, the communique said.

A warning of the Japanese menace to Allied outposts was sounded by General Blamey, land commander under MacArthur. He reported increasing Japanese activity in the islands above Australia, but observed that the Allies were building up their forces and "are now in a much better position than we ever have been to meet the Japaneses."

Japan's immediate hope, he continued, is to complete the encirclement of China, and added that "it is not yet clear whether completion of this objective would leave the Japanese free to move in other directions."

"Our land forces," he said, "are determined to carry the war to the enemy's territory as soon as possible, but advocacy of a second front is wrongly based at present. Allied leaders are determined to establish such a front when we are certain it will not be wasted and that we will be able to make a good job of it."

BEW Handles Procurement

The original executive order had not made it clear, he said, that negotiations with other republics of the Americas were to go through the State Department. After that actual procurement will be handled by the BEW.

In connection with the discussion, Mr. Roosevelt told of efforts to obtain a type of rubber from trees planted in Mexico and Haiti some 25 years ago, and then abandoned because their product could not be profitably marketed.

The BEW offered a high price for it over a period in the expectation that this would bring the substance out of the forests. The stratagem failed, however, and the BEW recommended a program under which crews would be organized to go into the forests and bring the rubber out. There are lots of the trees in Mexico and Haiti, Mr. Roosevelt remarked.

German Miners Lead Ruhr Anti-Nazi Front

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 1.—The flourishing existence of an anti-Nazi clandestine front among the miners of the German Ruhr district, organized and run by hidden committees, was revealed by a German delegate at the Miners' International Conference here today.

The delegate, whose identity could not be disclosed for security reasons, said that the miners' secret committees had joined hands recently with similar committees representing the steel and iron industries, and that despite untold difficulties, the movement was "working very actively against the Nazi regime on a wide front."

The Ruhr workers' movement, the German delegate said, originated at the outset of the war but development has been subject to obvious difficulties. The Nazi authorities have done their utmost to stamp it out and to prevent it from becoming known to the public, but it had now extended beyond the Ruhr. Hitler's threats in last Sunday's speech were certainly directed in part to this miners' movement, the delegate asserted.

"The illegal fighting committees, chiefly by word of mouth and underground whispering campaigns, have appealed to workers of all industries to obstruct the war effort in every possible way, such as demanding more pay and shorter hours and Sundays and holidays off.

"We will develop the solidarity of the International Miners Committee and do our best to assist in the fight of our British, American and Russian comrades to crush the power of those who would crush labor if they won this war,' said the Ruhr miner.

William Lawther, president of the British Mine Workers Federation, presiding at the meeting, called upon the miners of Germany and the occupied countries "to destroy your Nazi masters, wreck their pits, sabotage output and smash their machinery."

Lawther read a cablegram from the United Mine Workers of America greeting "our European comrades" and announcing that America's coal production" is now breaking all records." Other messages were read from Russia, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg.

Chinese on this front withdrew northward to the right bank of the Irrawaddy River west of Mandalay, said a new Delhi communique.

(To weaken the Japanese drive at its sea-head, United States fliers under Maj. Kaiser of the Brereton command in India struck across the Bay of Bengal at Rangoon, dumping 500-pound bombs on the docks in a night attack Wednesday and dodging both antiaircraft fire and attacks by Japanese fighters. One Japanese fighter plane was hit.)

The Chinese communique telling of the fighting north of Lashio said the Japanese attack was proceeding from the railway bridge north of that city, which the Japanese reached last night.

Despite the fall of Lashio, a spokesman insisted that China-India air services were continuing without hitch via a previously arranged stopping place.

D.C. Woman Sees War at First Hand

Consider a month in the life of Mrs. Golden W. Bell, back here from the Philippines since last October, for throughout that month the miseries and shock of sudden change on the lives of 3426 British women and children were felt by her, unforgetably.

Mrs. Bell, now residing at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel, had lived for two years in Manila, where her husband was legal adviser to the United States High Commissioner. A Red Cross leader there, she was given 48 hours' notice that two shiploads of evacuees were coming to Manila from Hongkong.

That day a typhoon began on the China Sea and a rain that was to last 12 days began falling in Manila. Then, on July 3, the first ship arrived in the city, where accommodations for outsiders at best totaled only 700 houses, and many outsiders already were there.

On July 7 the second ship arrived, docking in the rain while Mrs. Bell and her Red Cross coworkers gathered up blankets and food for them, working from 7 a. m. to late in the night. One of history's notable evacuations by sea was spilling its seasick and distressed load around her feet. Throughout the rain was incessant.

People started counting and saw that half of the evacuees were children, many suffering from impetigo, one child covered with it from head to feet. And people became startled over the number of pregnant women, leaving the ship in the rain. Thirty of them were placed in a hospital. In the terrific hurry of work their helpers couldn't expend their tongues on the two words, and referred to that group as the "P. W.'s." Seventy Filipino Red Cross nurses helped them along.

There were uncounted babies, all needing attention. All, of course, required food and shelter. Some from the first ship were sent to lodgings in the mountains. Roofs were found for the others. A dollar and 15 cents per person per day was allotted them for food. Dysentery cropped up.

Thirty babies were born.

The work of caring for the evacuees settled to a point where something could be done for their recreation. They left Hongkong on 24 hours' notice, many leaving their affairs uncertain. They worried about their husbands, back in the Crown Colony. The Red Cross arranged a short-wave broadcast, for them. In August, the first of them left for Australia.

Mrs. Bell lef for the United States in September, the ship touching at at Hongkong. It was expected to make a stop in Japan to receive 250 refugees from the impending war but the Japanese sent word it couldn't dock. The British government had cited Mrs. Bell for her calm, efficient work. She is staying with the Red Cross, as a member of the District Chapters' Motor Corps.

Service Men Wined, Dined in Brooklyn, Jurist Discloses

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—Axis agents lured American soldiers, sailors and marines to a Brooklyn house where they were wined and dined to obtain military information, Kings County Judge Samuel Leibowitz disclosed after a jury convicted the proprietor yesterday on a morals charge.

Gustave Beekman, 55, who was found guilty of operating the house, will be sentenced later. Leibowitz said the grand jury which returned the indictment against Beekman would remain in session in connection with further investigation of ramifications of the case.

"I am told," Leibowitz said in court yesterday, "that one of Hitler's chief espionage agents in this country was instrumental in getting soldiers, sailors and marines in going to this place, and he wined and dined them and gave them a royal good time, and he would obtain information where their ships were, where they were going to and coming to, where the soldiers were stationed and what was happening."

The judge added that "the truth is that various people came to these premises, one of whom has been described minutely by a witness." The jurist said he agreed with the district attorney that the name of this person should not be made known at present.

In a copyrighted story, the New York Post today said Beekman had made an affidavit, which would be turned over to the proper authorities, in which he described an outstanding citizen as one of those who had been in his place.

The Post said some of the details in the Beekman affidavit had been told by him a week ago to Naval Intelligence and attaches of Brooklyn District Attorney William O'Dwyer's office. O'Dwyer's office said today it had no information on the affidavit.

Meanwhile, Hubert Schmuederrich, 40, self-styled leader of the Gray Shirts and German-born naturalized citizen, was sentenced today to four years in prison on his guilty plea to violation of the Selective Service Act, and immediately faced proceedings to revoke his citizenship.

At the same time, action was begun to revoke the citizenship of Mario Lauro, 50, a lawyer of Italian extraction.

United States District Attorney Mathias Correa told Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard that Schmuederrich had failed to register under the Selective Service Act and that Lauro had acted as an Italian agent even after the United States had gone to war with Italy.

The denaturalization complaints alleged fraud in that both had "mental reservation" at the time they obtained their citizenship, Lauro in Brooklyn in June, 1933, and Schmuederrich in Chicago in 1929.

Schmuederrich, the complaint alleged, admitted to F. B. I. agents that he intended to convert members of the United States Army to the idea of National Socialism and to induce them to rebel against the Government.

Soldier Audiences Are Favorite of La Dietrich

Marlene Dietrich, a beautiful girl now doing a beautiful job for the Army, would rather sing her songs and perform her acts before soldiers than before any other type of audience.

The soldiers, she told The Post yesterday, are joyfully direct in their reactions. "They let you know you're on the stage," and she likes it.

Dozens of persons in the Carlton Hotel lobby where Miss Dietrich lounged on a sofa talking, reacted, too. The sun set her hair afire. An evening dressed foamed on her ankles. Her eyes were dreamy. The voice lulling.

Let's see. What was it Miss Dietrich was talking about?

Oh, yes, of Army food.

She has eaten much of it while performing in the camps for the Hollywood Division of the United Service Organizations Camp Shows. The Army bread, she declared, is the best she has ever eaten anywhere and she hasn't a reputation for frequenting the cheaper cafes. She likes the bread and the boys. They cheer when she comes on the stage, they take her picture and are nice all the time. They never ask for autographs.

If she didn't have to make money she would like to play to them all the time.

Making money? Then what about that proposed $25,000 limit on salaries?

"Oh, I hadn't heard of it," said Miss Dietrich.

Her brow creased slightly, in reflection.

"It seems to me I did hear something about that," she said. "I've been so busy going about the camps. It is entirely all right. Those things work themselves out all right."

Money. Miss Dietrich catches up with it sooner or later. Last year the Government discovered she had overpaid by $23,952 on her income taxes.

She plays the final of three-day performances at Fort Meade tonight. Of what the soldiers like, she observed, "Give them fast-moving shows." With that they're the best audience she knows of.

Baxter Grilling Ends

David Baxter, a leader in the secret revolutionist "Soci" organization, was released by the grand jurors yesterday, at the end of three weeks of grilling, presumably about the candidly revealed plan of his hidden colleagues to lead their armed followers in seizing control of a revolution, which they believe imminent in the United States.

Baxter said, as he left, that he thought he would either disband his organization or turn it over to Edward Price Bell, Terre Haute (Ind.) writer. Bell recently varied his criticism of the war effort with an effusive article in which he hailed Baxter as a sample of the "new leadership" needed by this country.

The grand jurors will resume their inquiry next Friday.

Two Promotions

Navy Doctors Elevated to Rear Admiral

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the recommendations of a Navy selection board which selected two naval medical officers for promotion to rear admiral.

The new rear admirals are Charles W. O. Bunker, of Edgemoor, Md., and Dallas G. Sutton, of Washington.

Admiral Bunker, now commander of the Naval Medical School, Bethsda, Md., is a native of Virginia, Iowa. He was graduated from Cornell University Medical School in 1905 and entered the Navy in 1907. He was described as "one of the outstanding specialists in internal medicine in the Navy."

Admiral Sutton, commander of the Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Va., was born here and graduated from George Washington University Medical School in 1906.

He was senior medical officer at the Naval Academy from 1934 to 1936 and for the next four years served as assistant chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery here. In 1940 he became commandant of the Naval Medical School and recently was transferred to Norfolk. The Navy announcement described him as "one of the outstanding psychiatrists of the Navy."

G. M. to Stop Making Parts, On WPB Order

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 1.—C. E. Wilson, General Motors president, tonight announced the corporation would suspend the manufacture of automotive service parts of all kinds indefinitely until a punitive order against G. M. by the War Production Board "can be properly clarified.

Wilson's statement was the first for the corporation since the WPB last night ordered G. M. to stop making auto parts for 90 days because of alleged violation of an order to conserve critical materials.

Wilson said the WPB order, brought "on account of minor technical violations of certain material orders in one plant," brings to a head the "difficulty of operating the corporation's many plants under the impractical, confusing and contradictory material orders of various sections of the War Production Board."

The WPB order charged that the Ternstedt Manufacturing Division of General Motors used considerable quantities of scarce chrome steel and aluminum in the manufacture of "bright work," decorative moldings, radiator grills and other body hardware for automobiles, in direct violation of regulations.

"The corporation's only purpose in producing service material during the past nine months has been to make available such material to its car owners and to keep as many of its employes working as possible pending the complete retooling of its plants for war production," Wilson said.

Wilson said the following instructions were sent tonight to all General Motors plants:

"On account of the difficulty of interpreting the many and conflicting orders regarding the use of critical materials in the manufacture of service parts for automobiles, trucks and buses, and, due to the fact that the corporation as a whole is being held responsible for any technical violation by any of the divisions, as shown by an order issued by the War Production Board against Ternstedt, but applying to the whole corporation, you are hereby instructed to stop the manufacture immediately of all service parts, except those on direct Government orders, until this whole matter can be properly clarified and it can be definitely known what items can be manufactured without subjecting the corporation to charges of noncompliance.

"Under no circumstances are any tools, dies or material to be sent outside with orders to others for production of any such material."

WAAC Action To Be Defined On Monday

The Senate Military Affairs Committee expects to decide Monday whether to recommend that the United States Army utilize the Nation's woman power in a regular Army unit or in a separate auxiliary force, Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina said yesterday.

At the conclusion of a closed hearing on the recommitted bill to set up a Women's Auxiliary Corps, Reynolds said that the committee would confer Monday with Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

Following this, he said, the committee would go into executive session to decide on what course of action it would recommend to the Senate.

Would Set Up Separate Unit

As originally passed by the House and approved by the Senate committee, the measure would have set up the WAAC as a separate organization acting in conjunction with the Army and performing noncombatant duties. It was recommitted after an amendment—in effect a substitute bill—was offered by Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah which would admit the girls into the Army itself.

Thomas declared that the formation of actual noncombatant petticoat battalions was indicated as the proper course by a naval bill passed by the House which let women into the Navy with the same rank, pay and privileges as men.

Testifying before the committee at yesterday's hearing were Army officials and Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin, who served in France with an ambulance corps during the last war and who has headed a Nation-wide organization of female overseas veterans.

Mrs. Mankin expressed hereself as in favor of the Thomas amendment because it would give the service men better protection and would avoid duplication in post-war veteran legislation.

"However," she added, "I would rather have the original plan than have the idea killed by the amendment."

Army Wants Action

The Army men, Reynolds said later, expressed no preference between the two systems, but were in favor of immediate action so that they could start using the women at once and release men for combatant service.

Reynolds pointed out that "noncombatant service" for which women would become liable would actually embrace close-to-the-firing-line work—such as the servicing of warplanes at battlefront fields.

Developed in the testimony, he said, was the point that if they women were admitted to a real Army status they would be protected by international law as prisoners of war if capture. Otherwise, they would be treated simply as civilians.

Senator Walsh indicated that he would seek to bring about a coordination between the Army and Navy bills when he went before the committee. His committee is now considering the measure to authorize sailorettes.

He also said that he was in favor of carrying the distinction between combatant and noncombatant duties into the field of privileges as well, asserting that if the women were to be given limited duty that they should be given limited privileges as well.

"In other words," he explained, "I don't want a female ensign or lieutenant, doing clerical work, to be on an equal basis with a submarine commander."

The Invaders

Pay Sexes Equally, Says NAM Head

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—The importance of women to industry drew new recognition today when William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, declared they were worth "equal pay for equal performance."

"Women can satisfactorily fill all or most jobs performed by men, subject only to the limitations of strength and physical requirements," Witherow said.

Better output by men workers resulted in some cases surveyed recently, Witherow said.

"Surprisingly, in a number of cases, the efficiency of men who had been articulate in their opposition to incoming women—claiming that 'women couldn't do anything but keep house and keep the children. and what did they know about nuts and bolts and machinery'—began to increase perceptibly," he related.

To overcome masculine opposition to women workers, he added, some companies would start out with half a dozen of the prettiest girls they could find.

Soon other departments were demanding girls in their divisions.

The problem of women in industry is of immediate importance, the business leader said, citing Government agency prophecies that four million women might be employed by the end of 1943.

"It has been clearly shown," Witherow said in commenting on the month-long survey, "that there is little difference between men and women as regards their satisfactory performance in industry."

Some of the Man vs. Woman findings of the survey included:

Women shouldn't be assigned to duties "which by nature are particularly dirty, dusty, hot or wet."

Women need assistance in "setting up," lifting, and the like.

Absenteeism among women is higher than men.

Women are more susceptible to fatigue.

Women have a shorter industrial life.

Those were points brought up by executives of 550 companies producing war goods, based on what they had learned.

As to the opposition of men workers to an influx of women, Witherow commented that it "was not based on logic or reason, but was, rather, an outcropping of the Adam and Eeve complex—the natural resentment of men who had reigned supreme in a company—at the idea of having their domain invaded by women.

"However, after a few women had been brought in, an amusing change in the men was evident.

"They began to primp in their appearance, slick down their hair, wear ties, occasional coats, etc., and very soon they began to boast to other departments, in which no women were yet working, about the 'little gals' working with them and how well they were doing."

8 Women Die, 10 Hurt in Pa. Factory Blast

By the Associated Press

McKeesport, Pa., May 1.—Eight women were blasted to death today and 10 others were injured in an explosition which gutted the mixing plant of the Central Railways Signal Co. in adjoining Versailles Borough.

A mixture of potash and sulphur, which the 20 women in the steel and concrete one-story building were making into torpedoes for railroad signal work, exploded.

Two-thirds of the 80-foot-long roof were blown out, along with all of the windows. Parts of bodies were scattered, some landing on the tracks of the adjoining railroad.

Five of the badly mutilated bodies were taken to Pittsburgh. Two died after being taken to the Mckeesport Hospital.

Gust Bassler, 50, a railroad brakeman, was first to enter the building after the explosion.

"It was terrifying," Bassler said. "Girls were running about screaming, blood gushing from wounds in their legs and arms.

"A pall of black smoke hung in and above the building."

Bassler said he seized a fire extinguisher and with Howard B. McKee, a volunteer fireman, put out a small blaze. Had the fire spread, another explosion would have occurred.

Police said a similar blast at the plant several years ago had taken a dozen lives. Forty persons were working in the three buildings, two of which were not seriously damaged.

F. B. I. agents were among the first outside authorities to reach the scene. Plant officials and the coroner said the immediate cause of the blast was unknown.

(The Labor Department announced in Washington that William T. Cameron, chief safety engineer of the department, had been directed to make an investigation.)

Vargas, Brazil's President, Hurt In Auto Crash

Rio de Janeiro, May 1 (AP).—President Getulio Vargas suffered cuts which required hospital attention in an automobile accident today while en route from nearby Petropolis to Guanabara Palace here.

The Chief Executive was taken to the palace and treated by a surgeon.

An official announcement said Vargas' automobile was in collision with another on a suburban street. It added that his injuries would make it necessary for him to remain in bed, but did not indicate how long.

Vargas, 59 years old April 19, has governed Brazil under varying conditions since his leadership of the revolution of 1930 which placed him in power.

Corregidor Bags 3 Jap Bombers, Hits 2 Others

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Melbourne, May 1 (U.P.).—Gunners defending the island fortress of Corregidor against heavy Japanese air attacks have shot down three enemy bombers and damaged two more, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's reports on the Philippines said today.

Japanese planes made 12 bombing attacks on Corregidor within 24 hours, a United Nations communique disclosed, but paid a high price for their efforts.

The aerial bombardment was combined with heavy shelling of the island fortresses in the mouth of Manila Bay by Japanese batteries on the nearby shore.

Counter-fire by the American and Filipino gunners scored hits on Japanese batteries, truck columns and supply dumps on the mainland of Luzon in addition to the effective work against the air raiders, the communique said.

N., of 215 Kennedy Drive, Chevy Chase, which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans Court at Rockville. The instrument was executed at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on May 3, 1935, and names Mrs. Wilcox executrix. The value of the estate is not indicated.

Plane Running Wild on Takeoff Killed Gen. George

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 1 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Harold H. George of the United States Army Air Corps and Melville Jacoby, Time and Life magazine correspondent, were killed at an advanced airdrome when struck by a fighter plane which got beyond control as it was taking off, Allied headquarters disclosed today.

General George and Jacoby were about to board another plane when the fighter craft crashed into their party, the official announcement said.

Funeral services for Jacoby were held today at a Melbourne crematorium. More than 30 American, British and Australian correspondents and a group of United States Army officers were present.

A military funeral is planned Saturday for General George, who was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal posthumously for his execution of "seemingly impossible tasks" as commander of air forces in the defense of Bataan.

Poll Tax Deadline

Today is the deadline for payment of poll taxes for voters of Arlington who wish to qualify for the Democratic primary on August 4 and in the general election in November, County Treasurer John Locke Green announced last night.

Hero's Wife Clings to Hope Report of Death Is False

Lieut. Olin G. King, who yesterday was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross posthumously for valor in the Philippines, lived in Alexandria, Va., when he was called into active service last June. He was graduated from George Washington University School of Law in 1940 and later was employed in the War Department. His last tour of duty as a reserve officer was at Fort Myer.

Lieut. King sailed July 13 for the Philippines and was stationed at Fort Stotsenburg, on Luzon, about 18 miles from Bataan. His son, whom he had never seen, Wayne Olin King, was born August 3, nearly a month after the father sailed.

Mrs. King, the former Mis Dora Lee Walsh, of near Laurel, Md., is staying with her sister at 8116 Hartford Avenue, Silver Spring, Md. She was notified April 23 that her husband had been "killed in battle, defending his country," January 22, but no details were given.

Mrs. King is a graduate nurse, having trained at Newark, N. J. She kept her emotions in check save that her lips trembled a bit when she mentioned that today would have been "Olin's birthday" and that the award of the D. S. C. is almost a birthday present. The couple was deeply devoted, friends said.

Mrs. King said that her husband in November had said in a letter that war with Japan was imminent but he had never expressed the slightest doubt that he would return to her and their son.

Lieut. King is survived by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jonathan Olin King of Salt Lake City; two sisters, Miss Edith King, a bacteriologist at Ogden, and Mrs. June Taylor, Salt Lake City.

Mrs. King said that the hero's mother clings to the hope that perhaps the report is a mistake and that she herself has such a secret hope. Details were lacking and she is clinging to the hope that there might have been an error.

Gore Bill to Add Wage Limit To President's Anti-Inflation Plan

Carrier Pigeons Make Dates

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FLYING BACK WITH GOOD NEWS—Two Sioux City, Iowa, swains sent two carrier pigeons by express to Louise (left) and Pauline Rothkop, Omaha sisters, yesterday with this message: "Could you come to Sioux City for a party a week from Saturday?" The sisters could and would, and they dictated a reply to be carried back to Sioux City by the pigeons

Compulsory Buying Of Bonds Will Also Be Incorporated

Legislation to carry the President's seven-point anti-inflation program "across the board" with legislative ceilings on wages and salaries as well as farm prices, last night was being drafted by Representative Albert Gore (Democrat) of Tennessee.

Representative Gore, original House advocate of "Baruch plan" controls, also will incorporate in his bill a provision for compulsory investment in Government war bonds.

President Roosevelt, in his anti-inflation message to Congress on Monday, asked administrative "stabilization" of wages without statutory action, but Gore hewed to the line of the original Baruch plan of "ceiling on everything" to hold down costs.

The Gore bill squares with the President's recommendation for repeal of the 110 per cent of parity farm price differential, and is the first Congressional move to that end. But it departs from the President's chart to write wage ceilings into law also, and to compel purchase of war bonds. President Roosevelt indicated he would ask statutory wage action and forced purchase of bonds only as a last resort, and if maximum voluntary efforts failed.

"Like time and tide, inflation waits for no man," Gore said. "The longer we wait, the tougher the job will be when we get to it, and the more drastic the measures we will have to use."

Favors Tax, Profits Points

His bill, which will be introduced in the House next week, setting wage and salary levels as of next week as his ceiling, leaves tax and profits points in the President's program for Ways and Means Committee action. Except for removing the farm price differential, it leaves prices and rents subject to Leon Henderson's price ceiling order. Services and control of installment credit likewise would be left to administrative action, without mention in the bill.

The bill vests complete authority in the War Labor Board to administer and enforce wage and salary ceilings, exempting only those wages which are below standards set in the Wage-Hour law.

No wage or salary increases could be made by employers without written permission of the board, but provision would be made for a rise in all ceilings in ratio to any rise in the official cost of living index.

Where wages in a non-war plant were higher in proportion than nearby war industries, handicapping the the latter's labor supply, the board would be empowered to make any wage adjustment necessary to encourage a shift of workers to war industries.

Compulsory investment in war bond features of the bill will start at a 10 per cent of salary requirement, with rates graduated upward according to income. To give force to the President's call for a $25,000 net income limit, the bill would require investment of all net income over $25,000 in war bonds.

Favored Baruch Plan

Gore, a member of the House Banking Committee, tried to substitute the Baruch plan for the original price bill in committee. Lacking Administration support, he was defeated in the committee and on the House floor.

The Tennesseean's efforts to remove the 110 per cent farm price formula came while the Congressional farm bloc was in open rebellion against that recommendation by the President. Gore believes farm members would be willing to accept straight "parity" prices if wage and salary ceilings were fixed at the same time.

The Senate farm bloc meanwhile was moving to head off any Senate action to carry out the President's farm price recommendations. The Senate Agriculture Committee, without any bill before it on the subject, will call representatives of farm organizations on May 7 to testify on the proposed return to straight "parity."

House Unit Asks 94% Profit Tax

voted by the committee, apply not only to war profits, but to all types of company earnings, on the Administration's prevailing theory that most business gains during the war indirectly result from war spending.

More Levies Discussed

The President, in his anti-inflation message, proposed that the Government take "all" undue or excess profits, but outlined no specific formula. He suggested a blanket clause tax that would capture any earnings in excess of the "legal profit figure." Next week the committee is expected to discuss various forms of possible additional "special" profits taxes, to catch any undue gains that escape the excess levy.

The high flat rate approved yesterday by the committee was originally part of a plan advanced by one member to step the rate far beyond Treasury recommendations, but return part of it to the companies for postwar rehabilitation, through nonnegotiable bonds or a special reserve fund.

Yesterday's vote opened the way for the refund step probably next week. Proposals for a postwar rebate would return from 10 to 20 per cent of the excess profits tax. These various plans will be discussed by the committee on Monday, Chairman Doughton told reporters. If the rebate is made in the form of war bonds, income from these would be subject to all taxes when the bonds are redeemed.

Also postponed until Monday was action on the Treasury's call for repeal of the declared value capital stock tax.

The excess profits tax plan approved yesterday allows corporations to choose either "average earnings" or "invested capital" methods of computing their tax, as in existing law.

The initial $5000 exemption before application of the profits tax formula would be increased to $10,000.

Under the average earnings method, all gains in excess of 95 per cent of a company's average earnings for the period 1936-1939, would then be subject to the 94 per cent flat rate tax.

Under the invested capital method the 94 per cent rate would apply to earnings in excess of 8 per cent of the first five million dollars of invested capital. This credit would be reduced to 7 per cent on the second five million dollars of invested capital, 6 per cent on the next 190 million dollars and 5 per cent on all invested capital above 200 million dollars.

Corporations would be allowed to retain the 6 per cent of excess profits remaining after the 94 per cent tax, without subjecting it to normal taxes. Present law applies normal taxes to earnings remaining after excess profits taxes.

Surtax Rate Increased

The corporate normal tax, retained in its present form by the committee, ranges taxes from 15 to 19 per cent on the first $25,000 of earnings and imposes a 24 per cent flat rate after that.

The present corporate war surtax, exacts a 6 per cent rate from companies earning up to $25,000, and 7 per cent on earnings above that amount. Yesterday's action moved the 6 per cent surtax rate up to 10, and increased the 7 per cent surtax to 16.

The 94 per cent flat excess profits tax rate would replace the existing graduated scale which ranges from 35 per cent to a top of only 60 per cent. The Treasury had asked that this be increased only 15 per cent, to a 50 to 75 per cent range, but the committee decided on a fixed tax 34 points higher than the present top rate.

Firm Charged With Slowing Zinc Output

By Chas O. Gridley
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The New Jersey Zinc Co. was accused of restricting production of high-grade zinc in the United States through patent controls at the same time that it permitted unlimited production by European countries, in testimony yesterday by Allen Dobey, special assistant to the Attorney General, before the Senate Patents Committee.

Offering many letters from the company's files indicating that requests from United States companies for licenses of its vertical retort process for manufacture of zinc had been refused, Dobey said:

"We believe that patent controls as exercised by the New Jersey Zinc Co. are the principal cause of the present shortage of high-grade zinc in this country.

"We believe that some legislative provision should be adopted whereby New Jersey's patented processes can be made available to the entire domestic zinc industry in order to alleviate the present shortage of high-grade zinc and to insure that the present shortage shall not become increasingly and dangerously acute."

High grade zinc is a vital war material, with principal military uses in shell casings, small arms ammunition and die casting parts for tanks and airplanes.

The department spokesman alleged that "under the guise of patent controls" the New Jersey company has erected its own private trade barriers throughout the world and has agreed not to export high grade zinc to the territory of its foreign licensees in return for a similar pledge from them regarding the United States.

In order to obtain maximum revenue from royalties, he alleged, the company had encouraged unlimited production of high grade zinc by its processes in foreign countries, including Germany.

"As a result this company has made a vital and substantial contribution to the German war machine," he said.

German Boast

Through use of the American process, which permits continuous production of zinc, a German technical magazine was able to boast in September 1939 that Germany was the greatest producer of zinc in the world, Dobey said, and added:

"In sharp contrast with New Jersey's license to the American Smelting & Refining Co., in this country, which limits production to 5000 tons of high grade zinc per year, and in sharp contrast with New Jersey's license to duPont in this country, which prohibited duPont from producing high-grade zinc by the licensed process, New Jersey's license to Metallgeselschaft A. G., a German company, placed no limit whatever upon the quality or the quantity of zinc metal that could be produced by the licensed process, provided the proper royalty payments were made."

The witness asserted that "New Jersey Zinc Co. has discouraged the production of additional high-grade zinc by interested parties in order to preserve the company's present position in the high-grade zinc industry after the war."

would find an opportunity for improving his value in the war effort.

The summer courses recommended are those for which a definite demand is being made by officials directing the various phases of the war effort. The commission listed six phases of education for which a strong demand already was evident, as follows:

1. Aviation education. Under this head courses developed by the United States Office of Education with other Government authorities will be available. (This was expected to cover prepilot study.)

2. Courses in science, mathematics, English and social studies adapted to the specific needs of the armed forces and war production.

3. Courses designed to train girls and women in business, trade and clerical occupations as replacements for those drawn into the armed forces or war production.

4. Courses in home nursing, nutrition, first aid and other fields definitely related to civilian defense and other war needs.

5. Intensive courses for promotion of physical fitness of those likely to enter the military services of war production within the next three years.

6. Training through cooperation with the Office of Civilian Defense for air raid wardens, auxiliary fire and police officers and such other personnel as may be needed.

Year-Around School Plan Indorsed Here

Year-round operation of the Nation's high schools to provide war service training courses for students was strongly indorsed by officials of the District public school system last night.

They said they had not had time to study the plan yet but would give it careful consideration with a view toward making it effective here. It was pointed out that aviation courses are already being given in some of the District high schools.

The plan for mobilization of education behind the war effort was urged yesterday by the U. S. Office of Education's wartime commission. Among courses proposed were aviation education, mathematics and science, home nursing and nutrition and civilian defense.

Mrs. Doyle Agrees 100%

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman of the District School Board, said the plan would be of incalculable value to high school students, particularly those who may later be inducted in the Nation's armed forces.

"I agree with the proposal 100 per cent," Mrs. Doyle said. "Summer courses in mathematics, science and aviation education would serve high school boys in excellent stead for what the future may hold for them. I also highly indorse the courses in home nursing, nutrition, first aid and other fields definitely related to civilian defense and other war needs. I do think, however, that a 12-month stretch of standard school training would be a bit too much for most of the students. But, under the proposed plan, as I understand it, the courses would not be compulsory and the students would be able to have a month's relaxation if they so desired."

Praise From Cantrell

Lawson J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools, also praised the plan.

"I think the proposal is excellent," he said. "We are now running some aviation courses in the schools here and they will be expanded this summer. The entire plan would be of great service to our youth in such times as these."

Cantrell said there were approximately 90,000 public school children in the District. Of these, about 19,000 would be affected by the summer courses.

Mrs. Gill Dies; Funeral Monday

Mrs. Bertha V. Gill, 78, lifelong resident of Washington, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital. She made her home with a granddaughter, Mrs. Virginia Galvin, at 3539 East Capitol Avenue.

She was the widow of Charles F. Gill. Surviving are her son, John T. Gill, two brothers, W. C. Gatewood of Washington and W. L. Gatewood of Colonial Beach, Va., and two sisters, Mrs. Molly Handler and Mrs. James S. King of Washington.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 9:30 a. m. from the home of Mrs. King, 6312 Second Street Northwest, to be followed by a mass at St. Gabriel's Catholic Church.

Schoolgirl Jumps From Peter Pan Into Fire of Spring

Fear of parental punishment after a three-day interval of hookey playing inspired by reading "Peter Pan," caused 10-year-old Virginia May Gradijan, 908 Larch Avenue, Takoma Park, to run away and spend the night in the woods, the child said when she returned home late yesterday.

Virginia May's adventure resulted in a general alarm and both the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department and the police of Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties undertook all-night search through the surrounding countryside. She returned home, however, of her own volition.

When questoned by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Gradijan, as to why she didn't like school, Virginia May replied that the little girl in Sir James Barrie's famous book didn't have to go to school, and she didn't want to go either, especially in nice spring weather.

Navy Flier Hurt, In Plane Wreck At Bolling Field

A two-seated Navy observation plane crashed yesterday morning soon after taking off from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, injuring the pilot, Lieut. Charles L. Crommelin, 33, of Beverly Hills, Alexandria.

Crommelin, who was alone in the ship, was taken to the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., with a broken leg, broken hip and lacerations of the arm and face. Physicians described his condition as "good."

A Navy spokesman said the flier evidently was attempting to set the plane down safely on a roadway at the Army's Bolling Field grounds, adjacent to the Navy airdrome, after it developed some trouble in taking off. The plane struck a fireplug and was practically demolished.

Crommelin was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1931.

Fish Will Run For Reelection

Representative Fish (Repub'lican) of New York formally announced yesterday his candidacy for reelection from the Twenty-sixth New York District which he has represented in Congress for 22 years.

At the same time the New Yorker, one of the outstanding isolationists in Congress before Pearl Harbor, disclosed that his request for active service with the Army had been turned down by the War Department.

He made public a letter to county committeemen in his district in which he said that Lieut. Gen. Leslie J. McNair, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, had informed him that because of his age and "your broad knowledge of military matters and understanding attitude toward the Army's problems, you will be of greater service in the halls of Congress than with the troops in the field."

Funds for TVA Stir Fight on Senate Floor

The Senate yesterday became embroiled in a controversy over fiscal policies of the Tennessee Valley Authority, for which Congress has appropriated more than a half-billion dollars on a program it authorized almost nine years ago—and last night it was expected that the battle would rage into the middle of next week.

The fight developed as the chamber was on the verge of sending along toward final legislative accomplishment economies totaling nearly $12,500,000 in 1943 appropriations for more than a score of Federal agencies.

The man who started the fight was Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, one of the chamber's top-flight battlers. He held the floor for 3½ hours—and still held it when the Senate recessed until Monday—swinging verbal blows at David E. Lilienthal, TVA board chairman, the Congress-approved policy of using its receipts as operating capital and the authority's joint operations with private utility companies.

Bill Carries Two Billions

Four Senators were scheduled to reply to McKellar when Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky interrupted the Tennessean to announce that Senate leaders had relinquished all hope of sending the independent offices appropriation bill to conference before Tuesday or Wednesday.

The bill, vehicle for the Senate's economies, carries $2,125,900,000 for the TVA and 21 other defense agencies.

Before the fight started, the Senate witnessed these economy developments:

1. A slashing attack by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, one of the leaders in the economy drive, on Government publicity bureaus, the multiplicity of which, he declared, "very nearly approaches a national scandal in the waste of public funds."

2. Voice vote acceptance of an amendment offered by Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland to limit to $50 the newspaper and periodical purchases of all agencies covered by the bill except the Office of Government Reports and the Selective Service system.

Byrd selected OGR, for which President Roosevelt caused the erection of the de luxe information center at Fourteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, as a classic example of publicity spending. Publicity and traveling expenses of Government employes cost $175,756,387 in the fiscal year ending last July 1, he said.

McKellar's Stand

In his attack on TVA, Senator McKellar was defending action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in striking from the House-passed bill authority for the agency to use power-sale revenues as a revolving fund from which it pays operating expenses. Lilienthal should be made to come to Congress for his money, "just like any other department head," said McKellar.

Observing that Congress, "for all these years," has permitted TVA a revolving fund, Senator Lucas (Democrat) of Illinois remarked: "It seems to me that in this serious crisis (the war) we might have overlooked this controversy here for another year or two."

Senator McKellar's open fight with TVA dates approximately from his unsuccessful scrap with the Administration over Douglas Dam. It was apparent yesterday that his dislike of Lilienthal is another element in the controversy.

After describing Lilienthal as a "mean" Harvard man who believes every one who disagrees with him is a "scoundrel," the Senator proclaimed: "I have given the best years of my life, the best thought of my mind to TVA and yet this man (Lilienthal) . . . has got the effrontery to go around in an airplane over Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi and denounce me as an enemy of TVA."

At one point, Senators McKellar, Barkley and Hill spent five minutes in heated discussion of the question: Why is TVA called TVA and which of the valley States has the biggest dam.

Business Editors Hear Henderson Talks on Prices

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday spent almost two hours discussing the recent price-freezing orders with more than 60 editors gathered here for the monthly, one-day session of the National Conference of Business Paper Editors.

One of his aides, Hector Lago of the OPA, also addressed the editors, as did E. W. Palmer, assistant chief of the printing and publications branch, War Production Board.

The editors' president, Paul Wooton, who is Washington correspondent of the McGraw-Hill publications, said the group's monthly meetings here are devoted to securing first hand information from Government officials concerning problems of interest to readers of the various business, industrial and technical publications which make up the conference.

Last night in Parlor A of the Willard Hotel, where all of the sessions were held, the editors heard addresses by Noel Hall, the British Minister, and Sir Owen Chalkley, commercial counselor of the British Embassy.

Coroner Probes Young Bride's Death of Poison

Police and the coroner's office last night were investigating the death of Mrs. Bernice Neff Understein, 18, bride of 5 months, who died at Emergency Hospital at noon yesterday of poison.

She walked into the hospital Wednesday night, according to police, and said she had taken poison she obtained from a chemical outfit at her home, 1451 Parkwood Place Northwest.

Detective Sergt. Edgar E. Scott investigated the death and said he learned the young woman had been married in December and was separated from her husband.

An autopsy was performed at the District Morgue yesterday but Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said a death certificate would be withheld pending the result of chemical analysis.

New England Forest Fires Deliberately Set, Officials Say; $1,500,000 Lumber Pile Burned

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 1.—Reports grew tonight that a score of fires which broke out suddenly in New England woodlands within a 24-hour period were deliberately set.

Damage was estimated unofficially at well above two million dollars. Even before all of the blazes were reported checked, the Army Intelligence, FBI and State officials sent investigators into the burned areas.

Gov. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, after viewing Army aerial photographs, asserted that the fires did not originate from a single blaze.

Massachusetts' Conservation Commissioner Raymond J. Kenney declared that his agents had found evidence that some of the fires in the Bay State were "deliberately set."

At least 14 farmsteads and summer cottages and a million and a half board feet of Government-stored lumber were destroyed by flames which raged for hours through the Coventry-West Greenwich section of Rhode Island, as Governor McGrath placed both those towns under martial law.

Shifting winds made it difficult to fight the fire and some of the fighters narrowly escaped being trapped.

More than 2500 men—soldiers, sailors and regular firemen—battled the blaze.

James R. Simmons, District supervisor of the United States Forest Service, asserted that his men found 15 fires along a 3-mile stretch of road.

"It seems strange to me," he added, "that 15 fires would suddenly spring up where the Government has so much lumber stored."

Brig. Gen. Peter Leo Cannon, who directed the Rhode Island State Guardmen, said flatly that "in my opinion the fires were set."

Great Virginia Fires Brought Under Control

By the Associated Press

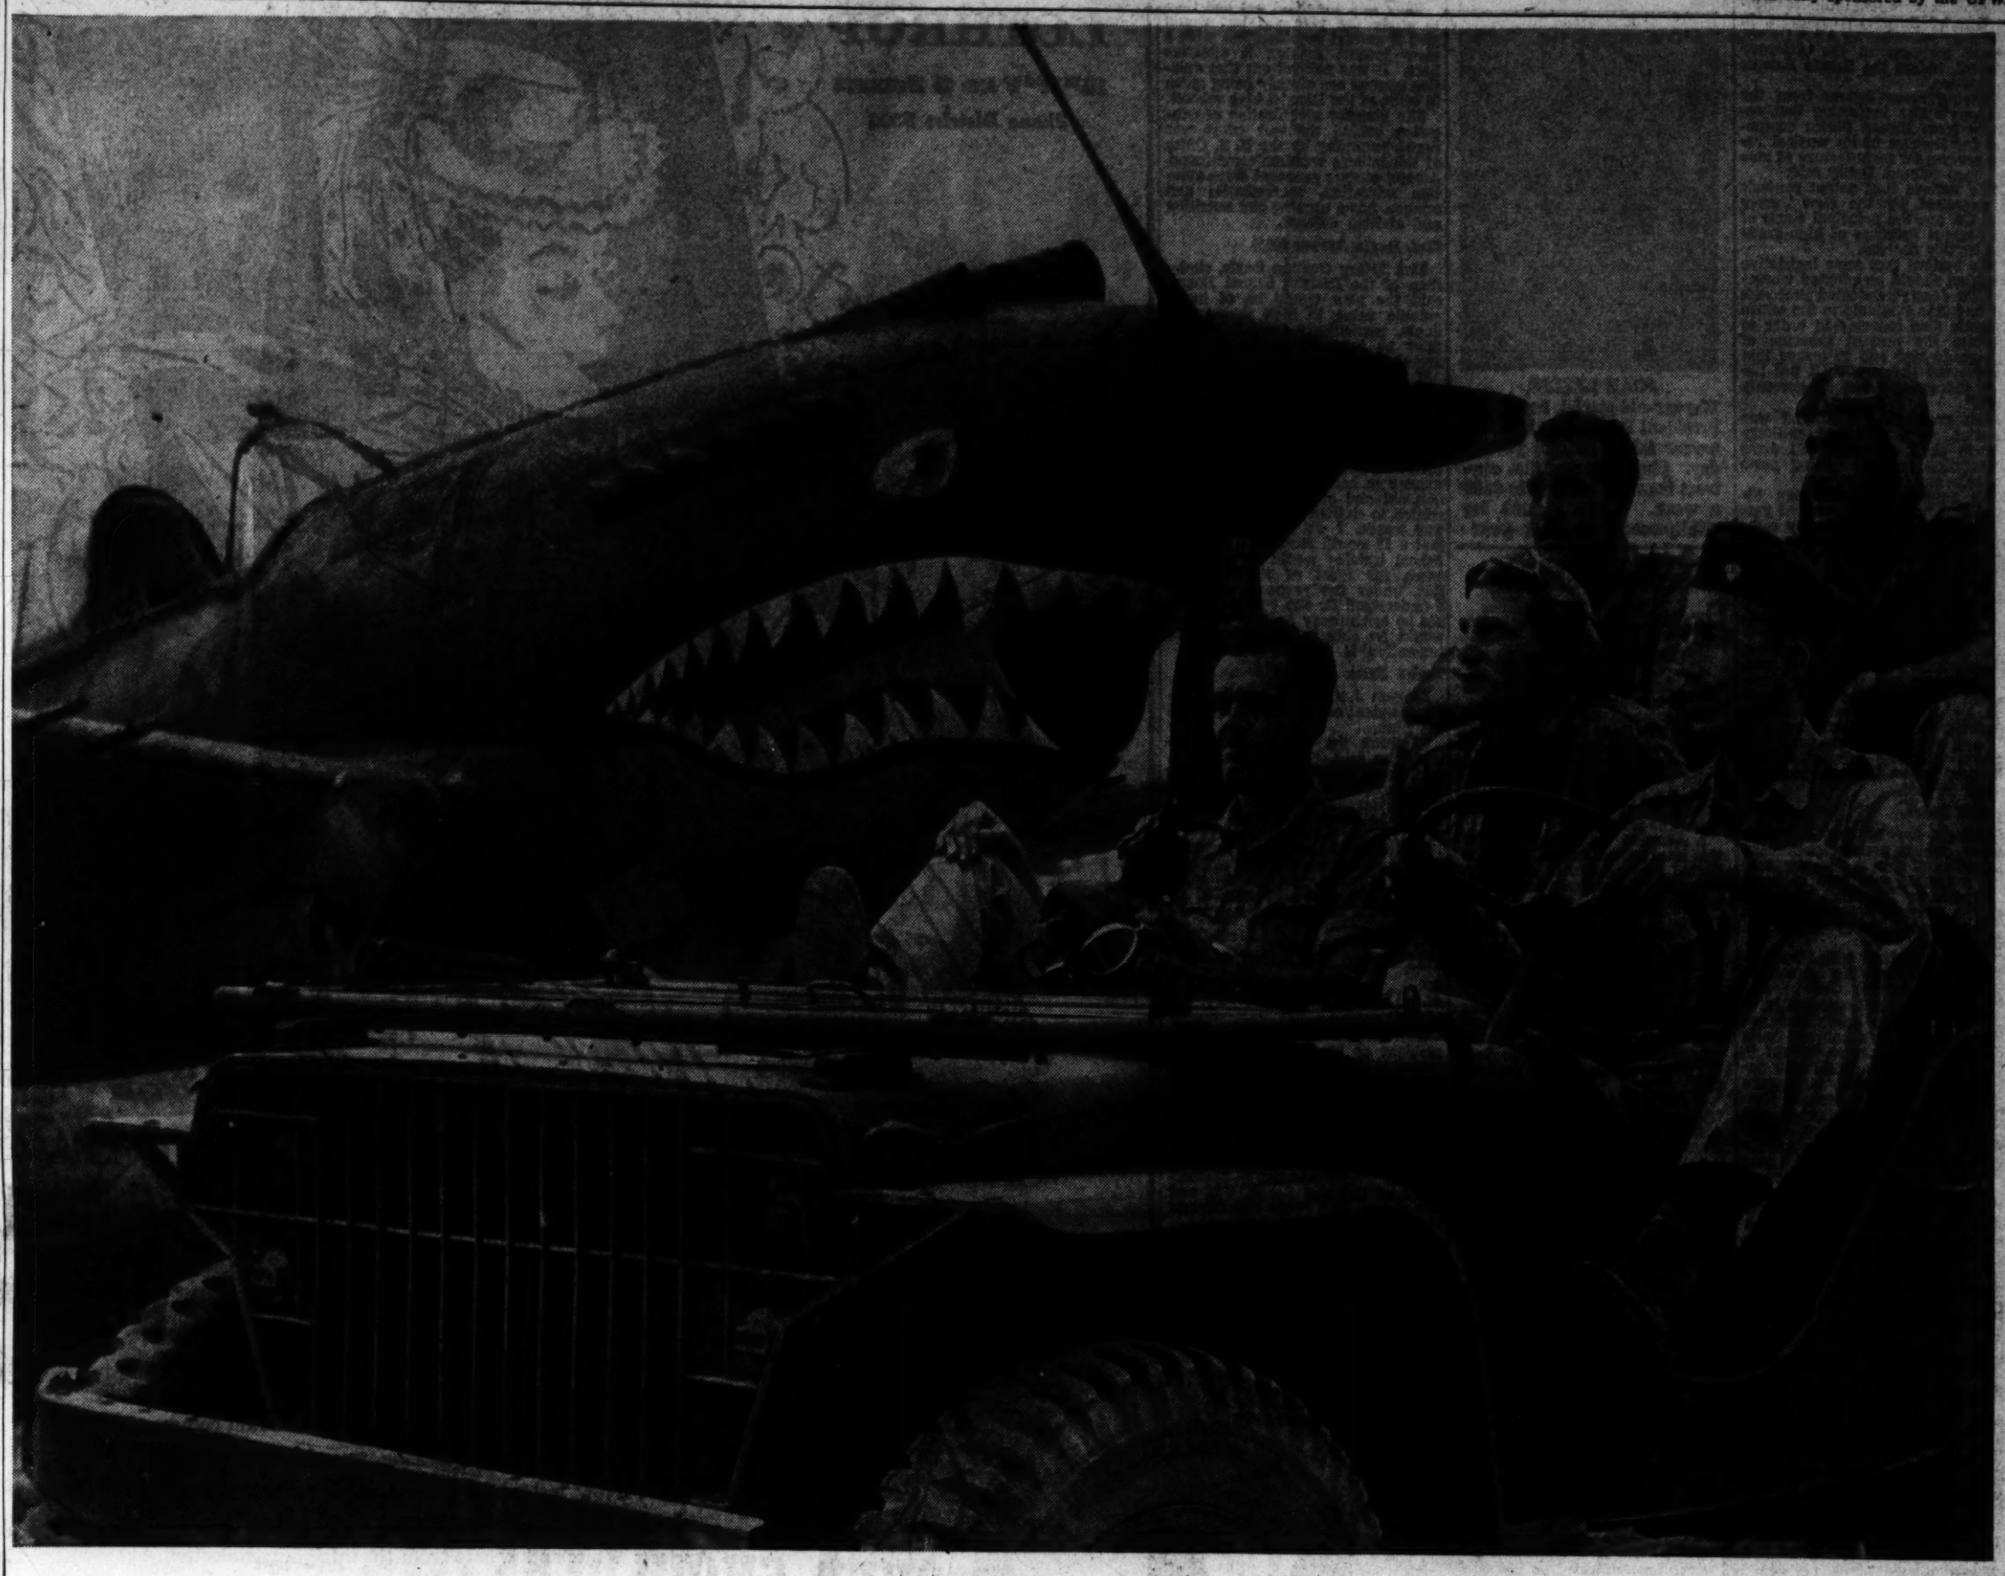

Firefighters in Southwest Virginia, weary after days of constantly battling forest fires that have dotted the section, reported last night that fires which spread along a nine-mile front in the Big Reed Island and Max Creek vicinities of Wythe and Pulaski Counties apparently had been brought under control.

The workers said no new fires were reported.

At least 20,000 acres of valuable timberland have been seared in the area, and some families have lost their homes and barns in the outbreaks.

U. F. W. Congratulates New British M. P.

William J. Brown, general secretary of the British Civil Service Clerical Association who was elected this week to Commons on the issue of opening a second front against Hitler, has been forwarded congratulations from the United Federal Workers, a C. Here's how the Flying Tigers feel about it

I HEAR they're making a big fuss about us back in the States.

But if you've got any medals to pass out, don't give them to us. Give them to the Chinese. They're the real heroes of this war. And don't you forget it.

Did you ever see a Chinese having his leg amputated . . . WITHOUT ANY ANESTHETIC?

I HAVE.

They moan for their mother, just as you and I would. And the tears roll down. And the knuckles go white.

BUT THE CHINESE FIGHT ON!

Do you know the place that sees more bombs than rain . . . where the people can only shake their fists at the planes, while their children die?

That place is Chungking, China.

BUT THE CHINESE FIGHT ON!

Do you know where they attack tanks with bottles of benzine? Where fifty million people lost their homes? Where two million orphans go hungry?

CHINA!

As long as China keeps fighting, they tie down 2,000,000 frantic Japs. Japs who might now be attacking us at Australia, Hawaii, and who knows where else.

WHAT A SPOT WE'D BE IN IF IT WEREN'T FOR CHINA!

But how long can a man take it? How long can China go on without more help—holding off the Japs on top of the fifth columnists and appeasers who would have China lay down their arms?

CHINA NEEDS US. AND WE NEED CHINA.

Lend-Lease just cannot do it all. The Chinese are looking to you, their best friend, for medical supplies . . . sulfanilamide . . . bandages . . . surgical instruments . . . ambulance units . . . and dear God, some anesthetics!

They need money to house the homeless . . . to feed the orphans . . . and build new factories beyond the mountains.

So won't you show China your hand?

Don't be ashamed to send anything too small. (An American dollar goes a long way in China.)

If you can afford to give big you'll never know how many lives you'll be saving, and how many people will be grateful to their dying day.

Money—just a little piece of paper—can do so much!

Send Contributions to Ord Preston, Treasurer, United China Relief, 1218 Connecticut Avenue.

WHAT AMERICAN MONEY WILL DO IN CHINA

10c will provide painless operations for 4 wounded soldiers.

15c will provide hospital care for one day for an air-raid victim.

40c will buy a refugee a 3-pound woolen blanket.

80c will feed an orphan for one month.

$1.00 will save 3 people from lockjaw,—or, buy 70 doses of sulfathiazole to combat pneumonia or blood poisoning.

$5.00 per child will set up an orphanage.

$25.00 will endow a hospital bed for one year.

$50.00 will buy 15 pounds of sulfanilamide,—or, start a surgical gauze cooperative.

$100.00 will buy 10,000 special formula vitamin capsules.

War Cuts May Day Festivities in Capital

Unions Dispense With Parades, Remain at Work

The exigencies of war cut to a minimum Washington's usually festive welcome to the year's fifth month yesterday—the hottest May day on record in the Capital.

With District recreational leaders and teachers occupied with preparations for sugar rationing registration next week, traditional Maypole dances and pageants at schools and playgrounds were postponed until later in the month.

Rallies ordinarily held by labor unions were canceled as workers remained at their jobs to keep the industrial wheels turning in support of the war effort.

Ceremonies Tomorrow

The American Legion May Day ceremonies at the District War Memorial in honor of the war dead were moved up to tomorrow so that participants might make use of their Sunday leisure instead of interrupting tasks of importance to a Nation at war.

While the mercury rose to a high of 94 degrees during the afternoon, the District's May Day activities were confined largely to observance of child health day.

The importance of good health among children in wartime was emphasized in classroom exhibits and exercises at public schools and in a parade of children from the Giddings School, 321 G Street Southeast.

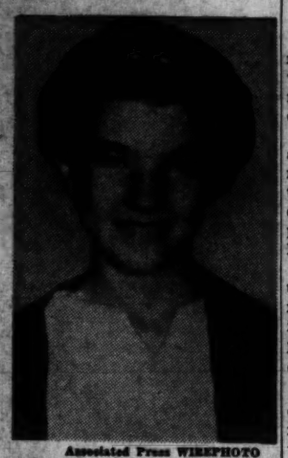

Hottest Day Thus Far

Dancing, health games and a miniature folk festival at the Southwest Community House, 501 Second Street Southwest, ended a two-day child health observance at the District's community centers.

The highest May 1 temperature since the Weather Bureau was established in 1872 was recorded at 3:40 p. m., when the mercury rose seven degrees above the previous May Day record of 87 set in 1930.

It was also a record for this year. The thermometer's previous 1942 high was 91 on April 6.

WPB Dips Into Ice Cream, Curbs Flavors

By the Associated Press

With hot weather setting in, the war caught up with the ice cream industry yesterday.

The War Production Board, in general instructions issued as conservation measures, limited manufacturers to 20 different flavors of ice cream and two flavors of sherbet or ices, and prohibited sales of more than two flavors a month in 5-cent cups.

At the same time the board asked butter producers to cooperate in plans for purchasing cream only three days a week in any one area.

Only two grades of ice cream may be manufactured in any one State, the instructions said, with not more than 10 flavors produced in either grade. Production of novelty ice cream was limited to five types or flavors each month.

WPB said the restrictions on flavors would cut down the size of manufacturers' stocks and conserve large quantities of containers.

Butter producers were forbidden to pack half and quarter pounds in cardboard, and one wrapping was prescribed for all butter sold at retail.

In New York, trade circles said that junior still will be able to buy his ice cream this summer and there will be plenty left for other civilian users and the armed forces.

Those sources would not hazard a guess as to how much ice cream Uncle Sam's soldiers would consume but pointed out that manufacturers would be allowed to produce for civilian consumption in May and June, for example, up to 70 per cent of their 1941 production under industrial sugar rationing orders.

The 70 per cent would be increased upward to 100 per cent of 1941 production because the industry would use corn syrup, corn sugar, honey—in some instances—and other sweetening agents which have been found satisfactory as a sugar substitute.

Since America's fighting forces do not come under industrial sugar allocation regulations, officials said, the 1942 production total might be one of the largest in the industry's history—considerably surpassing estimated production of 1.5 billions quarts in 1941 and 1.3 billion quarts in 1940.

One principal flavor problem confronting some manufacturers at the present time concerns vanilla. It has been increasingly difficult to obtain, some quarters reported, adding that there were supplies enough on hand, however, to take care of 1942 needs.

Arnold Barred From Testifying

thought it was "pretty unfortunate at this time." Biddle stated that Arnold's views were not those of the Department of Justice.

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, indorsed the purpose of the legislation in testifying before the subcommittee yesterday. He proposed an amendment to the Hobbs bill, which would modify the antiracketeering act in the light of the Supreme Court's decision, to impose maximum penalties of $5000 fine or two years in jail for persons attempting by violence to obstruct transportation of war supplies in interstate commerce.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has received "hundreds" of complaints, he said, in relating that a trucker hauling high-priority pipe to an East River (N. Y.) pier, charged that local union members would not permit the pipe to be unloaded until $17.35 was paid.

Hobbs told the subcommittee that his bill is based on "the principle that crime is crime and highway robbery is highway robbery no matter whether they have a union card or not."

Representative Monroney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, author of one of three bills before the subcommittee for study, declared he felt that the Supreme Court decision was not to be interpreted as a "carte blanche" to labor, but as a "blueprint" to guide Congress in remedying certain "blind spots" in its laws.

"I think that Congress, some day, will see to it that no outside force or combination of forces will override the rights that the whole of America is entitled to enjoy," Monroney declared.

Hobbs said the bills would be considered by the subcommittee in executive session "as soon as possible." He indicated the possibility that the measures might be combined into a single bill.

World's Workers Stick To Jobs on May Day

By the Associated Press

The working people of the world, whose day this traditionally is, forewent their customary parades and demonstrations yesterday—May Day—and stayed on the job under the driving demands of war.

The sentiments of most workers everywhere in the United States and elsewhere where men are still free was expressed in a statement by the New York United May Committee which said that "on this May Day the workers of the United States can best demonstrate their unity and determination to destroy fascism by rededicating themselves with their tools and energies in the factories and shops to the task of an ever-increasing and uninterrupted production of the instruments of modern warfare.

"This May Day the assembly lines humming with production are the lines of march to victory and freedom."

And so throughout the Nation, those in the past who have responded to parade calls, remained on the job and concentrated on the task of war production.

Parades Canceled

In cities throughout the Nation where parades and demonstrations have marked May Days of other years, the parades were canceled. There were indoor and outdoor rallies in some places, but always the emphasis was that they not interfere with the war effort.

The Communists met on Boston's Common and called for the creation of a western front against Hitler. The Women's Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, had a patriotic rally, also on the Common.

Leaders of the C. I. O. and the A. F. L. in Milwaukee said they were too busy with the war effort for any May Day demonstrations and similar reports came from other cities.

In Mexico City, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, in a message to the Federation of Latin American Workers, said the day should be considered "a day of defense of the Americas, a day for workers to promise work without rest against domestic and foreign partisans of Fascist barbarism."

The mass demonstrations which have marked the last 24 years of Russian celebration of May Day were canceled. Nevertheless, every city, town and village arranged for display of red banners to emphasize the necessity of "everything for the front," and huge portraits of Lenin, Stalin and other Bolshevist leaders.

Stalin Calls for Victory

Joseph Stalin, in a May Day order of the day, said Soviet Russia, receiving more and more military aid from Britain and the United States, must smash Adolf Hitler's troops on a surrender-or-die basis to make 1942 "a year of final defeat of the German Fascist armies."

In Berlin, Robert Ley, Hitler's lieutenant on labor affairs, appealed to the workers of Germany in a May Day message to make "a last supreme effort for victory."

It was a work day in Germany and even display of flags or bunting was forbidden. Frenchmen worked as usual, the holiday having been postponed by decree until today to give workmen a two-day weekend. A special decree for the German occupied zone forebade any meeting or parade.

The Victory Stampede Gets in Motion Today

Gene Autry Here to Bolster Navy Relief; Odds and Ends of the Restless Caravan; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT'S JUST ONE CARAVAN after another, these days. No sooner has the Hollywood Victory trainload of stars pulled out of Union Station than Gene Autry's pulls in.

Like its immediate predecessor, the Autry Victory Stampede for Navy Relief will exert a strong pull on the budgets of those concerned about their individual duties to the war effort and its allied causes. Ten per cent of the gross receipts of the nine-day Autry engagement will be donated to the Navy Relief Fund. Also like the train that had just left, the one that chugged into Union Station yesterday afternoon bore not only the star of the Stampede, but signalized the arrival of an extraordinary volume of entertainment.

GENE AUTRY

There are 150 star-spangled contestants and entertainers of various sorts in the Autry troupe—24 of them with extensive motion picture experience. Three hundred and fifty head of prize live stock also play an important part in the goings-on that will be undraped at Uline's Arena, beginning today and continuing through Sunday night, May 10.

As this is hunt-and-pecked Friday afternoon, the expectation is that later in the day Gene and his personal entourage will be making the rounds of the drama departments. Hope he brought his guitar with him!

Frances Heflin, ingenue with Jane Cowl in "Punch and Julia," to be given its premiere in the National Theater next Monday night, is following in the footsteps of Katharine Hepburn—she hopes.. That stage and screen star, recently seen here in "Without Love," got her first big stage break as ingenue with Miss Cowl in "Art and Mrs. Bottle." Van Heflin, newest of the Metro-Golden-Mayer screen stars, will have an Oklahoma pippin apple in his sister's dressing room on opening night. It is an old Barrymore custom that the Heflins like. Her elder brother, Martin, chief of the Federal Home Loan Bank System's press section, also will fall in line with the Royal Family tradition, with a Baldwin. A tough night for the doctors! Frances was more interested in her piano lessons than in dramatics when she attended Classen High School in Oklahoma City and was rushed by Kappa Kappa Gamma. Then came the offer from Brother Van to finance her through Barnard College, if she would come East to make things more homelike for him. It wasn't long after that that Day Tuttle, formerly director of the Civic Theater, "discovered" her for a year's run in his revival of "Charley's Aunt."

Afterthoughts on the Big Night

For the first time in the history of the theater, every seat in Loew's Capitol was occupied and paid for when the curtain went up on the Hollywood Victory Caravan Show Thursday night. Such seats as ordinarily would have been occupied by "skulls"—show business' dainty vernacular for "deadheads"—were paid for in cash by the motion picture industry to swell the gross receipts for Army-Navy Relief . . . Immediately in front of your reporter, in the mezzanine "golden circle" section where smoking is permitted, sat Leon Henderson, with his inevitable retreaded, white-wall cigar. It may be all right for Mr. Henderson to ration tires, but that is no reason why he has a right to smoke them! . . . Those bandages that were being worn on the glamorous gams of Claudette Colbert and Joan Bennett at Wednesday's rehearsals, but were off the night of the show, were not occasioned by the ordeals of high-pressure rehearsing. Miss Colbert brought hers from the ski slides at Sun Valley and Miss Bennett had gone to sleep on the wrong end of an electric heating pad—so they said . . . That 42-piece orchestra, under the skillful conductorship of Alfred Newman, did a noble job and brought back memories of the days when the Capitol was the Fox and Meyer Davis had a 50-piece band regularly in the pit as his contribution to house overhead . . . The whole show merely confirmed a contention that has been one of our pets for years—that practically every star in the films possesses talents the public never suspects from their work on the screen . . . As far as that is concerned, I never knew until last week that Al Trahan could play the clarinet . . . Not that that has anything to do with films or the Caravan. . . . But, now that it's all over, whatever became of Bing Crosby, Spencer Tracy and Ray McDonald, among those early announced to be among those present? . . . Those nifties Bob Hope and Cary Grant pulled off in the course of their emceeing really were nifties. Especially the one about the visitor to town on business who finally saw Ickes!

On Monday, the Variety Club is tossing a luncheon in honor of Harry Hunter, with Joseph P. Morgan and Rudolph Berger as kings for the day. Mr. Hunter is the former Washington branch manager for Paramount, just returned from the general managership of Paramount interests in Australia. We'll be telling you what he'll be telling us.

Saturday night crowds and the dearth of late-hour diversion in Washington being what they are these days, Manager Roland Robbins calls down from the corner of Fourteenth and H that tonight he is inaugurating the innovation of Saturday midnight shows at the Trans-Lux Theater, beginning at 12:05 a. m.

Palace

Now the "Gone With the Wind" has arrived at the Palace for its third anniversary visit, as Al Smith used to say, l...'s look at the record.

The David Selznick production based on the Margaret Mitchell best-seller was first released in December 1939 after a buildup that would have been fatal to any but a genuinely fine achievement. "Gone With the Wind" turned this hug of death into an affectionate embrace. Vivien Lehigh, Clark Gable, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Haviland might well have trembled for their professional careers before the final verdict was placed.

"Gone With the Wind" hadn't been released a month when it received ten of the year's awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences—"Oscars" to the trade. Most prized of this collection, naturally enough, was its citation as the year's outstanding picture.

Other "bests" in the three-hour, 45-minute triumph included: Vivien Leigh for the best performance by and actress; Hattie McDaniel for the best performance by an actress in a supporting role; Victor Fleming for his direction; the late Sidney Howard for his screenplay; Lyle Wheeler for his art direction; Hal Kern and James Newcome for their editing; Ernest Haller for their cinematography; William Cameron Menzies for his use of color photography and Don Musgrave and the studio for "pioneering in use of coordinated equipment."

Much as has been written and said of this phenomenal success—it has netted over 20 million dollars—"Gone With the Wind" still manages to be worthy of all the praise that has been heaped on it simply as a technical achievement. A first visit to it is a must; on subsequent viewings its remarkable qualities become clearer and clearer.

Earle

The pendulum of public taste oscillates through a wide arc. Evidently satiated with "escaping" the serious problems of the day in contemplation of the frivolous inanities, picturegoers now are seeking "escape" from triviality by embracing the somber things of life in the Warner Brothers picturization of Henry Bellaman's "Kings Row," now entering its second week at the Earle Theater.

"Kings Row" is a superbly produced and splendidly acted picture. It enlists the services of an exceptional cast that responded with a uniform intelligence and skill to Director Sam Wood's camera translation of a grim tale of frustrated lives in a small Midwestern city. While there are occasional respites from the starkness of it all, "Kings Row" concerns itself chiefly with an excursion into the psychiatric mysteries of jealousy, insanity, murder, suicide and sadism. In the large view, it is a pretty gloomy business, although from the public's reaction to the film a vast majority must respond more readily to its submerged inspirational qualities than to its morbidity.

Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan, Maria Ouspenskaya, Betty Field, Claude Rains, Charles Coburn, Nancy Coleman, Kaaren Verne, Judith Anderson, Earnest Cossart and Harry Davenport are among those who do much to bring distinction to this drama of spiritual depression. But it is Ann Sheridan who does most. Miss Sheridan is rearing herself steadily into the front rank of our most competent young actresses.

HEDDA HOPPER

Take Your Choice

Hollywood, Calif., May 1.—It looks as if there are two distinct types of pictures produced in this town—the ones the studios pour out money to make, and the ones the public pours in money to see. When Producer Jack Votion took a flier on Lum and Abner and put them into "Dreaming Out Loud," R. K. O. officials gaped at the returns. Now the second Votion-Lum-and-Abner film, "Bashful Bachelor," is doing smash business all over the country. Already in many towns they've outgrossed "Ball of Fire," Kitty Foyle" and "The Little Foxes," and more than doubled the gross on "Dreaming Out Loud."

BOB HOPE

Gene Autry, probably the biggest biz office draw in pictures, is virtually never seen in this town. Many of our 30,000 in the industry like to think that Hollywood represents the Nation and shapes public taste; but the rest of the 130,000,000 keep right on knowing what they like and paying to see it.

During the last year Bob Hope has been practically snowed under with awards, certificates, honorable mentions, polls, cups, statues and even a note of commendation from President Roosevelt, for his ability to make people laugh. But the one he values highest of all is a small gold replica of a Holy Scroll, presented by the sponsors of the Jewish Home for the Aged here.

When Bob hit town five years ago, comparatively unknown, he was asked to appear at a benefit for the home. It was his first Hollywood recognition, and he's m. c'd every benefit given by that organization since. The Holy Scroll is a symbol sacred to the Jewish race, and Bob feels that no higher or more touching compliment could have been paid him by the people of another faith.

Dottie Lamour's got a one-man fan club all to herself right here in town. He's Dick Denning, the good-looking young blond giant who plays the lead opposite her in "Beyond the Blue Horizon." Dick, who's been under contract to Paramount for several years past, undergoing strenuous grooming for lead parts, got his first real chance with Dottie.

"I'd done, extra work, played bits, and 'stood-in' for tests with all the stars for so long," Dick told me, "I felt like those magazine ads—'often a bridesmaid, but never a bride.' And when they gave me the good news, I was as jittery as a colt. But from the minute I was introduced to her on the set, she sensed my nervousnes and sort of took me under her wing. She's the most regular person I've ever met, and I wish there was some way I could thank her." Take a bow, Dottie!

Hear Ethel Waters and M.-G.-M. are tangling over "Stormy Weather."

'Two Yanks' Opens at Met.

By Richard L. Coe

Punchy acting jobs by Pat O'Brien, Brian Donlevy and "Serg." Donald MacBride, snappy directing by Gregory Ratoff and a fairly lively script make the Metropolitan's "Two Yanks in Trinidad" a hearty and amusing service comedy.

Sy Bartlett's story concerns two partners in gangsterism who respect each other as brothers until Donlevy learns that in one very minor money trick he's been made to look like a sucker by adept O'Brien. He goes gunning for him and has to join the Army to do it. The fellows ultimately are brought together by a delectable dish making her first screen appearance, Janet Blair, and from then on their adventures begin. Their troubles and triumphs in the Army are lively fun; their brush with villainous John Emery and the news of Pearl Harbor give them opportunity for heroics and also to settle their differences.

Novel Short Subjects

There's a good deal of humor, for instance, in an early scene which finds Donlevy set to give O'Brien a surprise birthday dinner. With tough faces well scrubbed, the two boys' corps of thugs gathers to celebrate the event, to admire a shatterproof car Donlevy's giving his partner and to be shocked into silence when three messenger boys explain the money trick that's been baffling Donlevy for three expensive months.

Tradition gets its bow in a cafe fight, the blow-up of an oil tanker and some other familiar scenes, but they're handled with bang-bang treatment that makes them surefire.

As intimated, the leads are in tiptop shape; shape might also be the word to describe the new Miss Blair, who does right by the title song and dance. John Emery is the chill villain, Roger Clark is another new face as an upper-crust help to our boys and Frank Jenks is baffled as ever.

The Met's short subjects take a novel turn this week, with an unusual "Carnival in Brazil," presenting striking views of Rio, some evidently authentic dancing and a brief song from one of the concert season's best-liked visitors, Elsie Houston. Maxie Rosenbloom is the star of the other short, offering the story of his life with unconcealed knocks at other screen biographies.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, May 1.

A group of Hollywood people now visiting New York dined together early this week. They included Mr. and Mrs. David Selznick, and Herman Mankiewicz, who won an Academy Award this year for having co-authored "Citizen Kane." . . . While they were dining they heard the announcement about the proposed $25,000 limitation on incomes . . . A suggestion was made by one of the guests that Mrs. Selznick, daughter of L. B. Mayer—whose $697,000 salary last year was the highest in the Nation—telephone her father in Hollywood and ask him what he thought of the new income-limitation . . . "You don't have to telephone Mr. Mayer to hear what he's saying," said Mankiewicz, in the New York apartment. "Just open the windows."

MAE WEST

Nazi propagandists will get the bad news, wholesale, before the week is over . . . The youth groups at Freedom House will start a campaign for nickels and dimes, to buy a "Statue of Liberty," to be presented to France after the war is won . . . St. John Tyrrell, the young producer who has been corresponding, by cablegram, with George Bernard Shaw—about presenting Mae West in one of Shaw's plays—has stopped sending his messages by cables, and now corresponds with Shaw by mail. "When all this is over," Tyrrell explained last night, "at least I'll have some valuable signed Shaw letters, instead of unsavable cablegrams."

Gilbert Miller, to whose home always have come the most blueblooded and titled notables, met a prominent actor who complained to him about the proposals for limiting incomes to a maximum of $25,000 . . . "There's one consolation, Mr. Miller," the actor sighed. "With this new tax law cutting our incomes down to the same figure, it'll make you and me social equals." . . . "Not social," Miller corrected. "Financial."

Oscar Serlin, who just sold the movie rights of Steinbeck's "The Moon Is Drawn" to Darryl Zanuck for $300,000, says that the sales price naturally included Zanuck's pants . . . Lillian Hellman has left for Hollywood to write the movie adaptation of her play, "Watch on the Rhine" . . . The office of District Attorney O'Dwyer now is preparing a report to the Governor, to be submitted before O'Dwyer enters the Army. The report will cover O'Dwyer's accomplishments since he took office 2½ years ago.

Mark Hellinger's final production for Twentieth Century-Fox, "Moontide," will enrich that studio's bank-balances. Hellinger now has the job he wanted, at Warners . . . Ann Corio, the strip-teaser, was seated next to Merle Oberon in a midtown night club, and told of her new movie assignment. "My last picture," Ann revealed, "was written, directed and finished within six days. It got the worst reviews of the year, but made money." . . . "What was the name of that movie?" Miss Oberon asked . . . "'Swamp Woman,'" said Ann, "or—'It Shouldn't Happen to a Dog.'"

In Lindy's, Moss Hart revealed to Danny Kaye that, at 17, he wrote and sold his first play—about Oscar Wilde. It wasn't produced, because of a threatened law suit by the heirs of Lord Arthur Douglas . . . "Douglas wasn't a bad poet," said Hart. "I read some of his poems in the Oxford Book of Verse. The first one has as its theme——" . . . A waiter interrupted: "Mr. Kaye, we only have pineapple cheese-cake left" . . . "How dare you interrupt a reading from the Oxford Book of Verse by mentioning cheese-cake," Hart berated the waiter. "And by the way, I'll have a piece, too."

RKO-Keith's

Whipped together from ingredients that are unfailingly popular with those whose tastes run to melodrama's most pungent flavor, Alfred Hitchcock's production of "Saboteur" now is in its inevitable second week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

While there are those who perceive in this timely subject a slight recession from the high point of the Hitchcockian finesse, there is no defect in it that a highly schooled indifference to plausibility won't cure. In its early sequences, this examination of the purposes and methods of the destructionists within our borders adheres with rigid fidelity to most of the Hitchcock traditions of taut and tingling drama. In its latter half the picture gets considerably out of hand and romps through all manner of exciting extravagances that are pretty hard to take—especially since, instead of pillorying the foreign-born enemy agent, they deal with America's more or less legendary "Cliveden set."

The piece is excellently played, under Mr. Hitchcock's direction, by Robert Cummings and Priscilla Lane, in association with Otto Kruger, Vaughan Glaser, Alma Kruger, Norman Lloyd, Alan Baxter, Clem Bevans, Dorothy Peterson and numerous others.

The supplementary bill also is being continued through a second chapter.

Stock Broker In N. Y. Gets Hero Award

By the United Press

Pittsburgh, May 1.—For dramatically rescuing a companion from being killed by a Negro hatchet wielder aboard a moving subway train, a New York stock broker tonight was honored by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, which awarded 10 bronze medals for heroic acts.

The broker, C. Tyler Wood, 40, of Port Washington, Long Island, was standing talking to Emery L. Bryan, 48, sales manager, on the subway train in New York City November 10, 1939, when a Negro approached and hit Bryan on the head with a hatchet. Bryan fell to the floor and all the passengers but Wood fled in panic to an adjoining car.

Talked Kindly to Him

As the assailant advanced in a threatening manner toward Wood and the fallen Bryan, Wood talked kindly to the Negro, who was persuaded to sit down in another part of the car. Bryan, suffering from a fractured skull, from which he subsequently recovered, was removed to another car. The train was stopped and the assailant arrested, later to be sentenced to a penitentiary.

A housewife, Mrs. Hattie F. Garralts, 46, Elgin, Ill., was awarded a medal for attacking an enraged bull with a hatchet, thus saving Carl J. Meier, 24, from being gored to death.

For entering a burning bedroom to rescue some boys, Keith E. Tiffany, 27, of Six Lakes, Mich., was honored. Ray S. Jenney, 39, of Battle Creek, Mich., was given a medal for a heroic act in another Michigan fire.

One Died Trying to Save a Life

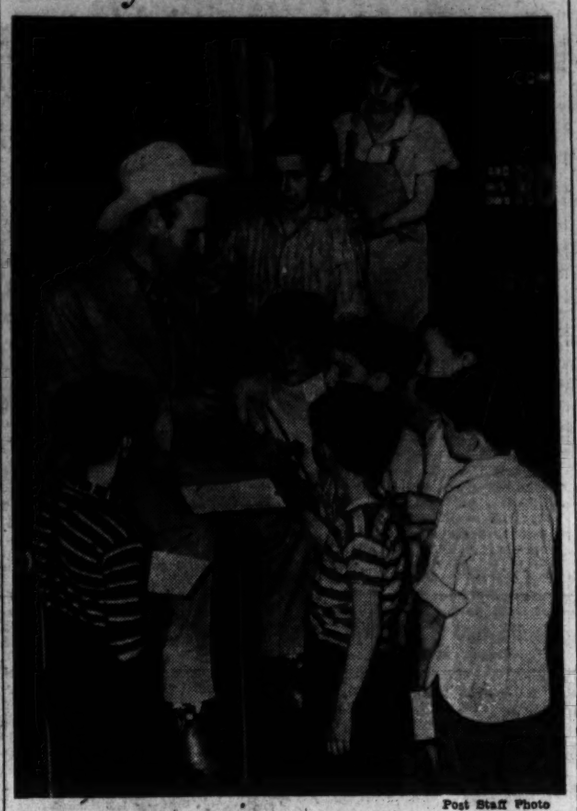

One of those honored, Donald C. Riesenberger, 18, schoolboy of Rochester, N. Y., died in attempting to save Kenneth W. Kefford, 15, who also died, from drowning when they broke through thin ice.

Four others honored for rescuing persons from drowning were: Milton Lobel, 32, New York City; Edward L. Gehring, 27, Albemarle, N. C.; Mrs. Amelia K. Funk, 27, Los Angeles, and Miss Glenna L. Campbell, 20, Louisville, Ky.

Saving 5-year-old Mayme C. Cater from being killed by a train when the car in which she was a passenger stalled on the tracks, won recognition from Troy W. Pridmore, 29, of Glenwood Easley, S. C.

In six cases the commission, at its spring meeting, made awards totaling $2500 for the purchase of homes or other worthy purposes.

Autry Arrives With Rodeo

Toll of Axis Planes At Malta 101 in April

Valletta, Malta, May 1 (U.P.).—Anti-aircraft gunners defending Malta against almost ceaseless attack shot down 101 Axis planes during April, four Thursday when seven more were damaged, it was announced tonight.

Gene Autry's Arrival Here Hailed by Kids

Gene Autry, kingpin of the Hollywood horse operas who boasts an overall popularity rating enjoyed by few in the film capital, pulled into Washington yesterday with his $250,000 Flying Ranch Stampede which today at 2:30 p. m. opens a nine-day engagement at Uline's Arena, Third and M Streets Northeast.

Arrival of the singing cowboy and his entourage set off a minor stampede of kids who rushed out to Uline's for a glimpse of their idol.

Ten per cent of the show's receipts will be donated to the District Navy Relief Fund, and so yesterday Gene paid a visit to the Navy Department and received warm thanks from officials there while big-eyed stenographers crowded around to see what was cookin'. The donation to the Navy Fund is expected to approximate $7500.

Autry's show has a personnel of 150 entertainers and contestants, not to mention 350 head of cattle with so much blue blood in their veins that special pens were built in and around the arena to house them.

In the cast are Duff Aber, Homer Pettigrew, Fritz Truan and Bill McMacken, names unfamiliar to laymen but of high repute in the bronco-bustin' trade. They'll try their tricks on Top Rail, who, the press agent vows and declares, has never been ridden before.

Matinees on Saturdays and Sundays begin at 2:30, the nightly performances at 8:30, and Autry, of course, appears at each performance.

Navy Relief Ball Set for Tonight

A grand ball for Navy relief will be held tonight at the Shoreham Hotel by Civil Service Lodge, No. 32, American Federation of Government Employes.

Nearly 300 service men will be guests of honor together with members of Congress and Government officials. Special honor guests will be President Harry B. Mitchell of the United States Civil Service and Mrs. Mitchell.

Later in the evening a fashion show featuring professional models will be held.

All in a Year

Directory Lists 58,336 Newcomers

If traffic congestion and the housing problem isn't proof enough that Washington is the fastest growing city on earth, the 1942 District of Columbia Directory, just off the press, should convince the most skeptical.

According to the publishers, R. L. Polk & Co., the new edition "represents the largest increase of names in an annual city directory within the memory of man." In any case, it is approximately the size and shape of Webster's Unabridged, and is heavy enough to fell an ox.

The new directory lists 534,104 names, an increase of 58,336 over last year's 484,786. In addition, it contains enough miscellaneous oddments of information to keep students of curious patronyms occupied for months.

The first person listed for example, is Miss Geraldine Aab, Department of Agriculture stenographer, 1467 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, though the American Automobile Association leads off by initialing itself AAA.

The last name is that of Justice M. Zyvoloski, a Navy Yard employe. Zyvoloski might be classed as a ringer, however, since he lives in Hyattsville. In this case the final listing honors would go to Chester A. Zytkus, another Government stenographer, who lives at 4014 Ninth Street Northeast.

There is also a Hitler, who is a baker by trade, and not a housepainter; a Sailor, who, appropriately enough, is in the Navy, and a whole slough of names like War, Arms, Cannon, Tanks, Drum, Blood, Sweat and Tears, all of which are too familiar in this day.

Congress Discovers That Sugar Is Rationed

By the Associated Press

The war came home to Congress yesterday.

The familiar silver sugar bowls that were so freely used in the House dining room were missing.

Inquiring coffee-drinkers were given a solitary cube of sugar and reminded that sugar rationing is an actuality.

Walsh Fears U. S. Must Face Another War

The world may look forward to another holocaust following conclusion of the present struggle "unless the spirit of man be purged of gross materialism and worship of speed, motion and external form," Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and regent of the School of Foreign Service, declared last night.

Delivering the last of a series of lectures on "America Faces Total War," in Memorial Continental Hall, Dr. Walsh outlined what he believed to be the major defects in the conduct of international policy during the past 25 years and foresaw the "need of wise preparation, clearness of vision and firmness of both hand and heart" when the United States goes to the peace table at the end of this war.

Major international mistakes of the past were cited by the speaker as excessive nationalism and insistence on unlimited unsovereignty by individual States; half-hearted attempts at collective security; monopolistic control by a favored few nations of essential raw materials, and failure to provide reasonable outlets for countries of rapidly increasing population.

But the correction of these errors will not mean peace, Dr. Walsh declared.

"The Four Freedoms, Atlantic Charters, Bills of Rights, Freedom of the Seas and International Law, have never yet nor ever will be secured by economists, statesmen or financial wizards. They are only the external expression of something that lies deep and invisible within the human soul. International law is only a control; it is not a cure of human passion. What the world needs is great preachers of human solidarity, human spirituality and the Fatherhood of God."

Symphony Drive Raises Under $3000

Less than three thousand dollars has been raised during the first half of the ten-day extended period of the National Symphony Orchestra's drive for a $114,000 fund to maintain the orchestra through its 1942-43 season.

This was announced by E. R. Finkenstaedt, campaign chairman, yesterday at a luncheon for the chairmen and vice chairmen of the drive's nine fund soliciting committees at a luncheon in the Hotel Mayflower. A total of $75,060.90, representing 65.7 per cent of the goal, has been raised, Finkenstaedt said. Since $72,239.93, or 63.4 per cent of the goal, was reported when the campaign was scheduled to close last Monday, only $2,820.07 has been raised in the intervening five days.

"The figures speak for themselves," Finkenstaedt said. "Every worker must bend every effort between now and the final report luncheon next Wednesday to cover every known possible contributor. And again I should like to ask everyone in Washington who is interested in the National Symphony's future not to wait to be personally solicited, but to send in their contribution at once."

Finkenstaedt added that more than 50 firms which have never before made contributions sent in subscriptions this year.

Representatives of the various committees attending yesterday's luncheon meeting were David B. Karrick, metropolitan committee; Mark Lansburgh and Mrs. Foster Adams, business and professional committee; Mrs. William Ayres Borden, Army committee; Mrs. Eugene Byrnes and Mrs. Reeve Lewis, associations; Miss Betsy Winter, Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury and Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton, education committee; Mrs. Emory Scott Land and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, Navy committee; Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Mrs. A. K. Payne, Mrs. G. A. Goetchus and Mrs. Warren Grimes, Orchestra Guild; Mrs. Edwin B. Parker and Mrs. Robert LeFevre, suburban committee, and J. P. Hayes, National Symphony manager.

Fireside Chat Brings $107 to Help Buy Bomber

President Roosevelt yesterday revealed this example of typical and unselfish American patriotism:

A man with a wife and three children wrote the President to say that his family realized more than ever, after listening to his fireside chat Tuesday, that wars cost money and can be won only by stern sacrifice.

So, the letter continued, the man and his wife drew half their life savings out of the bank and sent the President a money order for $107.50.

The couple suggested the money be used toward buying a bomber to blast our enemies in repayment for Pearl Harbor, and said they would like to hear of more air raids on Japan.

Mr. Roosevelt said the money order was typical of what many people feel. Some 30,000 men, women and children have made voluntary contributions—many directly to the President—for weapons with which to lick the Axis.

Leahy Leaves Vichy; Wife's Body On Same Train

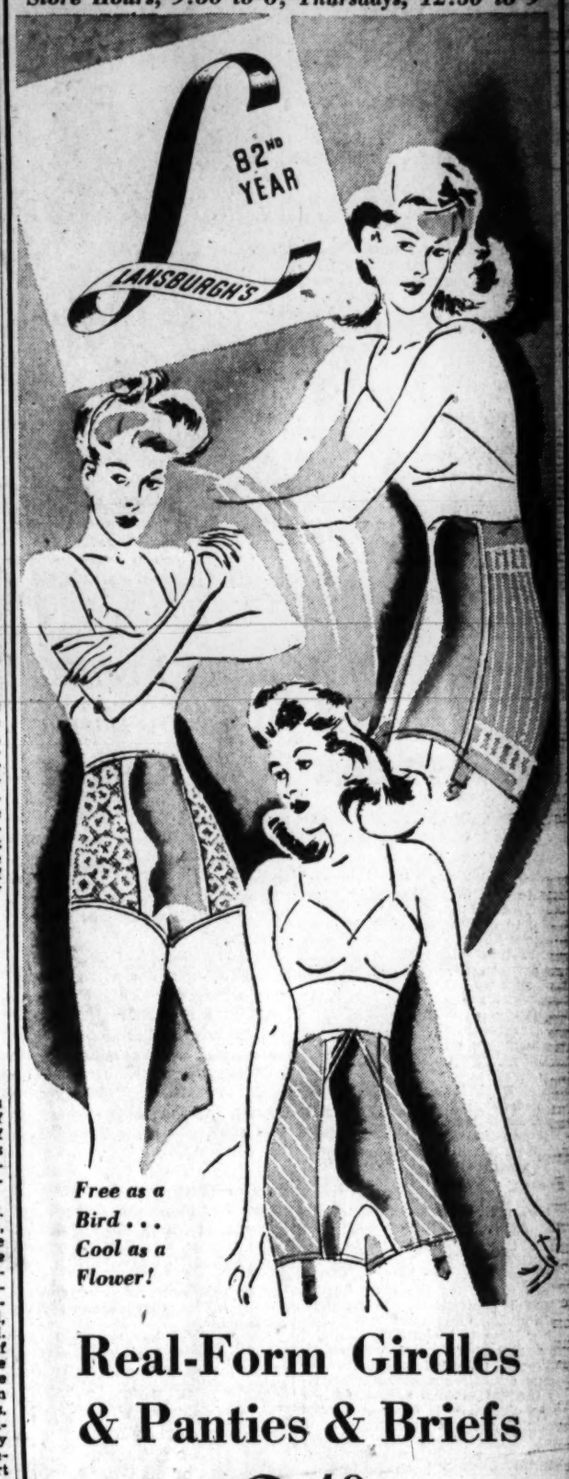

Vichy, France, May 1 (AP).—United States Ambassador William D. Leahy's special train pulled out of the Vichy station at 10 o'clock tonight, watched by a silent and tearful crowd of diplomatic and Vichy government representatives, the small American colony and a number of plain French men and women who somehow had heard about the Ambassador's departure for home.

On the same train was the body of Leahy's' wife, who died a few hours after the Ambassador received orders to return to Washington for consultation.

Rear Admiral Rene Platon, secretary of state in the foreign ministry, represented the Vichy government. He told embassy officials:

"We are very sorry to see him go. It is a great pity that he leaves us under these circumstances. It is an honor for me to represent the chief of government on this occasion. He is a great Ambassador with a great heart."

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This Hymn was almost certainly written by St. Ambrose—as testified by later writers, and its similarity to other works of the same author. It has the very rare distinction of being included as the hymn for Lauds on Monday in both the primitive cycles of Hymns for the Week.

Hyattsville Methodist Church Opens Sesquicentennial Fete

Reception Is Held For Members, Friends; Dr. McClay to Preach

The celebration of the sesquicentennial of Hyattsville (Md.) Memorial Methodist Church, was launched last night with a reception for members and friends in the parish hall.

The Rev. Harold P. McClay, pastor of the Solomons Island Methodist Church, and who in his early years was a member of the Hyattsville Memorial Methodist Church, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m., sharing the communion service with the Rev. W. Clark Main, pastor. Tomorrow also will be homecoming day. Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will preach May 10 at 11 a. m.

Historical records state the Hyattsville church, a member of the Methodist Episcopal branch before Methodist unification in 1939, was organized in 1792, ten years before the first recorded formation of a Methodist Society in Washington. The old church building near the stone jail in Bladensburg was said to be its first quarters. That edifice was abandoned in 1859, when a new two-story building was erected on Water Street, now the Baltimore Boulevard.

When the church was built on its present site, the congregation became part of a charge known as Hyattsville and Langdon. Since 1921, it has been a separate appointment of the Baltimore Conference. Part of the present building was built by Roger Bellis as a memorial to his wife.

THE REV. W. CLARK MAIN

Previous ministers of the congregation who have served at the present location were the Rev. H. R. Miller, C. E. Ely, C. H. Wagner, Joseph R. Wood, W. J. Meeks, C. T. Weed, Osborne Belt, A. W. Rudisill, M. F. Lowe, S. E. Rose, E. N. Bergerayock, L. P. Chastain, Herman McKay, U. S. A. Heavener, J. C. Sinclair and the Rev. Mr. Main. The last-named pastor was appointed in 1939.

Dr. Buschmeyer On Church Council

The Rev. Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer, minister of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, has just been elected a member of the executive committee of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches in America. He was born in California and educated at the University of Southern California Law School; Boston University School of Religious Education and Boston University School of Theology.

He served as director of religious education in the Methodist Church of Newton Center, Mass., and the Leydon Congregational Church, Brookline, Mass., before taking a pastorate at the Community Church, Durham, N. H.. Prior to coming to Washington in 1938 he was pastor of the First Congregational Church, Manchester, N. H.

Army Chaplains Performed Heroic Service on Bataan

When the valiant defense of Bataan by American and Philippine forces is fully recorded, among the stirring deeds recounted of the brave who served there, will be many which were performed by Army chaplains.

The efforts under trying conditions of a score or more Army chaplains to minister to the spiritual and morale needs of the besieged defenders of Bataan were revealed in reports from them reaching the Chief of Chaplains in the War Department. The reports covered activities for the months of December, 1941, and January, 1942, of chaplains serving in the Philippines.

In Constant Demand

The constant demand for the chaplains' services was disclosed by the reports. Chaplain Ralph W. D. Brown of Seattle, Wash., who was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross in January, wrote:

"Every day here is Sunday when the chaplain arrives. Days and dates have lost significance."

Chaplain Herman C. Baumann of Pittsburgh, Pa., reported:

"Said Holy Mass in a different place each day."

No exact records could be kept, it was explained, due to the urgency of their duties, but a tabulation of the reports reveals that in January, 499 services, denominational or general, were held on Sundays and weekdays which were attended by approximately 26,000 soldiers and civilians; 310 hospital visits were made, representing approximately 45,000 individual calls; 313 funeral services were conducted, and four baptisms held.

Hitch-Hiking Chaplains

Regarding the difficulties of reaching all units of their command, one chaplain stated:

"I traveled 2000 miles on rough roads and jungle trails, visited 20 different camps."

Chaplain Frederick B. Howden of Roswell, N. Mex., reported:

"Scarcity of transportation makes visits to field positions difficult, but by walking and hitch-hiking all positions have been visited one or more times during the month."

Other chaplains reported as follows:

Chaplain Samuel E. Donald of Clifton Forge, Va.:

". . . Religious administration to 100 sick and wounded in the field."

Chaplain Alfred C. Oliver of San Francisco, Calif.:

"Made numerous trips along all fronts holding conferences with chaplains and arranging services where units were isolated."

Chaplain James W. O'Brien of San Jose, Calif.:

"Administered to isolated Air Corps groups and tank outfits."

Chaplain John A. Wilson of Havre de Grace, Md.:

"Visited troops practically every day in the battle area."

Chaplain Frank L. Tiffany of Ellendale, N. Dak., said:

"Religious and Biblical literature was at a premium from the beginning of the Bataan front."

". . . hundreds of boys are asking for Bibles," another chaplain commented. "The Bible is being read here by the men as I've never seen it read before."

Genuine Fervor Found

Chaplain Robert P. Taylor of Carrollton, Tex., reported:

". . . a personal daily devotional held in the interest and on behalf of the entire personnel of the regiment."

Chaplain John K. Borneman of Niagara Falls, N. Y., wrote:

"A very genuine and great increase in religious interest has been shown . . ."

"The tremendous reliance on religious factors available through chaplains was both an inspiration and a challenge," another stated.

A colorful procession of more than 600 young people, members of the junior choirs of Episcopal churches throughout the District and vicinity, in their vestments and carrying the flags of their church, will open the Lenten offering presentation service tomorrow at 4 p. m. at Washington Cathedral. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., Bishop of Washington, will make the address.

A feature of the service will be the presentation of the diocesan flag by the bishop to the church school which compiled during the year the best notebook on the mission study of the church.

The special service for the church schools of the Washington Diocese was arranged by Miss Frances Withers, head of the committee on special offerings of the department of religious education of the diocese; Lewis T. Boynton, executive secretary of the department of religious education, and the Rev. Curtis Draper, jr., canon of the cathedral.

Following the service an organ recital will be heard by the well-known organist, Edouard Nies-Berger, from the Centenary Methodist Church, Richmond, Va.

For the First Time

Church Federation Plaque May Be Awarded to Woman

For the first time since the award was initiated, a woman may become the recipient of the annual plaque of the Federation of Churches for outstanding laymen's service to Washington's religious life, it was learned yesterday.

LaROE

The plaque—now reposing in the study of Community Chest President Coleman Jennings, 1941 winner, will be presented at the annual meeting on May 20 at 6:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

The new federation constitution will be presented for formal adoption by the federation's new constitution committee, of which Wilbur J. LaRoe is chairman. That committee is under the reorganization committee.

Meanwhile, messages urging support of the federation's drive for $34,288 continued to roll into the federation offices at 1751 N Street Northwest.

Judge Eugene Black of the Board of Tax Appeals and prominent layman of Mount Place Methodist Church, declared:

"I happen to be a member of a large downtown Protestant church. It is a church of many activities and with what we believe is a worth-while program of Christian progress and community upbuilding. We realize, however, that we cannot attain the largest measure of success in the work which we are endeavoring to do without working in closest cooperation with other churches of the city who are engaged in similar activities.

"We feel that the Washington Federation of Churches furnishes the most practical and effective means in bringing about that cooperation. Now that the crowded conditions of our city have multiplied the opportunities and responsibilities of our churches, I feel that the work of the Washington Federation of Churches is more needed than ever before, and I sincerely hope that it will receive willing and generous support in the financial campaign now in progress."

Undermining The ADA

With only a brief explanation which entirely missed the point at issue, the Senate on Thursday voted to liquidate one of the most hopeful experiments ever undertaken in Washington. It denied the Alley Dwelling Authority the use of receipts from properties it has built and is now operating without subsidies on a business-like basis. If the House should agree to this backward step, rents collected by the ADA will hereafter go into the Federal Treasury and that agency will have to request appropriations annually for the repair of its buildings and payment of its administrative expenses.

The effect of the amendment would be to smash the orderly system under which the ADA has been operating and to put it on a political basis. Its houses in question have been built to last for 60 years. Rents have been fixed at a point where they will fully pay the cost of the projects, plus 3 per cent interest, over that period. In addition they will pay all maintenance and operation costs. Through rigid economy and good management, these slum-reclamation projects would thus pay their own way from the rents collected annually.

The importance of this experiment is that it shows how horrible slums can be eliminated without any ultimate cost to the taxpayer. It is true that the Government has invested $865,000 in these projects. But under the present set-up all that sum with interest will be returned to the Government in the form of cash or property values. Certainly it will not be an economy to divert this money into the Treasury and have Congress dole out operating funds to the ADA each year. That method inevitably leads an agency to ask for more than it needs, and often to the uneconomic spending of money to avoid turning it back.

Senator McKellar attempted to justify the basic change in policy advocated by his committee by saying that the ADA "wanted to use $90,000 to collect, say, $60,000 in rents." That, of course, is absurd. What the ADA asked was permission to use funds paid as rents to operate its housing units and to build up reserves for repairs and repayment of the sum originally invested. When the war is ended, moreover, the ADA will be expected to go forward with its slum-reclamation work. It is of the utmost importance to leave its business-like system intact for that undertaking. Nothing can be gained and much would be lost by taking away the responsibility of such semi-independent agencies to make a good showing with the funds they have invested for the Government. To reduce them to the status of collecting agencies dependent upon the whim of Congress for annual appropriations would be a costly blunder.

It is true that Congress needs a closer check upon the self-sustaining activities of Federal agencies in this category. But that check can be provided without depriving them of all incentive to manage the affairs entrusted to them with economy and efficiency. Let Congress improve the means of watching the activities of such agencies for any possible waste or abuse of power and not undermine the system which enables them to work effectively.

Forward Step

The old adage: "Where there's a will, there's a way" is brought to mind by the War Labor Board's announcement that a way has been found to deal with jurisdictional disputes between unions. While the arrangement is limited to the duration of the war and to disputes affecting the war effort, it is to be hoped that it will put an end for all time to a particularly exasperating form of internecine strife. For jurisdictional disputes leave employers in the position of helpless onlookers and give organized labor a bad name with certain sections of the public.

President Green of the A. F. of L. and President Murray of the C. I. O. have agreed to dispose of jurisdictional disputes involving both organizations as well as disputes within the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., respectively, by referring them to the labor members of the War Labor Board for adjustment. If these labor members fail to effect a settlement, Messrs. Green and Murray will then appoint a group or an individual to make a final binding decision. This seems to be a sensible way of dealing with a class of disputes that, as the War Labor Board says, "have always been the most difficult to settle because of their very nature." If the plan works—and it is launched under most promising auspices—it hardly seems likely that the leaders of organized labor will be so short-sighted as to encourage postwar reversion to prewar methods of settling jurisdictional disputes by the arbitrament of force.

L'Affaire Giraud

The escape of Gen. Henri Giraud from the Nazi prison at Koenigstein is, just as it stands, one of the most interesting personal exploits of the war. But certain of the details as reported are more than a bit confusing and give the impression that there is more in the escape than meets the eye.

The general is now said to be in Unoccupied France and to have had a meeting with Marshal Petain to whom he is said to have spoken "as one soldier to another." This rhetorical phrase, unfortunately, does not give us any special clew to either the subject or the temper of the conversation. Moreover, such a meeting would appear to have put the old marshal, still the titular head of the French state, in a somewhat compromising position. Under Article 20 of the Franco-German armistice the Nazis could demand that General Giraud be turned over to them immediately.

The ancient Koenigstein fortress from which the general escaped is near the border between Saxony and Bohemia; that is to say, several hundred miles by any route to the nearest point on the Swiss border. General Giraud, now in his sixties, is said to have got out of the fortress by sliding down a 57-foot rope. He hid for a time in the fortress moat and then calmly boarded a train. Somehow he had managed to provide himself with a ticket to Switzerland, and somehow he was able to persuade both the railroad officials, his fellow travelers, and the Gestapo guards at the border that he was really one M. dePrunt, a Swiss, returning home from a business trip. But when General Giraud crossed the Swiss border on April 21, he identified himself to the authorities. Four days later, his identity having been confirmed and the legal aspects of his case examined, he was permitted to leave Switzerland. It was not until after he had crossed into France that the Nazi radio announced his escape, offered a reward of 100,000 marks for his recapture, and threatened death to anyone who sought to aid him. Interestingly enough, the first news of General Giraud's escape to reach this country came over the carefully censored cables from Vichy.

From all these facts one must conclude that the general's escape could only have been effected through the collusion of a considerable number of persons inside Germany, and presumably Germans. Why, for example, was the escape not immediately reported to Berlin? Or, if it was reported, why the long delay in sending out the alarm? Or why, if General Giraud was worth 100,000 marks to the Nazis last week, do they not get him for nothing now simply by giving the order to their Gauleiter Laval? And why should various Germans have risked their necks for the sake of abetting the escape of a Frenchman? On the other hand, assuming that the Nazi hierarchs have their own labyrinthine reasons for wanting General Giraud back in France, why was this elaborate stage setting necessary? Why could they not have released him and let it go at that?

Assuredly there is much more to this case of General Giraud than we have been permitted to know about. And when the story is told, it may prove to be as strange and startling in its way as the still unexplained case of Deputy-Fuehrer Hess. A cautiously worded and purposely ambiguous dispatch from Bern hints that General Giraud "may yet have a part to play" in French history. But as to what this part is likely to be, you must make your own guess.

Overburdened Roads

During the past year the railroads, in spite of having 600,000 fewer cars in service, handled a larger volume of freight than was carried in the peak year of 1929. By their own efforts, and with the cooperation of shippers, they succeeded in making more effective use of their limited equipment by speeding up the unloading of freight cars, holding back shipments to plants unable to handle incoming supplies, and coming closer to full capacity loading. The record in regard to oil shipments by tank car is particularly outstanding. For, instead of the 200,000 barrels of oil which the roads estimated they might be able to carry daily to the Atlantic Seaboard, daily receipts are believed to be currently averaging about three times that amount of oil.

Nevertheless, the railways are worried about the outlook for the coming months, and so is Joseph B. Eastman, director of transportation. The most immediately disturbing factor, according to Mr. Eastman, is the threat of extensive tie-ups of trucks and passenger cars due to the rubber and gas shortages. The result would be to increase terminal congestion and also to throw additional traffic loads upon the already heavily burdened railways. One obvious way to relieve threatened congestion is to acquire more freight cars and other equipment.

But, unfortunately for the roads, the 130,000 new freight cars that they requested have been whittled down by the WPB to a mere 18,000 cars which they hope will be delivered this year. Mr. Eastman considers this provision inadequate, and continues to appeal to the board for more cars and locomotives. In any event, every effort will have to be made to get more use out of existing equipment. It may even become necessary to curtail traffic not essential to the war effort, just as we have had to cut down on consumption of other goods and services.

That railway managements will do everything possible to further the war effort by meeting the unprecedented demands of the present emergency is a certainty. Failure to do their utmost would precipitate demands for Government seizure and operation of the roads as a war measure. While such action would solve none of the problems confronting the roads, it is an ever present contingency, challenging them to make the best possible use of the facilities at their disposal.

Naming The War

About three weeks ago, you remember, the President suggested that a kind of popular symposium be conducted in the press for the purpose of choosing a new and more appropriate name for the present planetary unpleasantness.

The response was enormous. Judging merely on the evidence of letters sent to this office, is appeared that almost every citizen had a pet name to offer. Most of these names went beyond mere descriptiveness and contained ethical or emotional or philosophic overtones such as "The War Against Paganism," "The War for Humanity," "The War of Liberation" and so on. The President himself favored "The Survival War," while Mr. Curtin, the Australian Prime Minister, thought it ought to be called "The People's War." But, despite all this, a canvass taken by Dr. Gallup and his public opinion experts discloses that the great bulk of the people are quite content to go on calling it "The Second World War."

This would indicate that the processes of nomenclature, like most other processes of language, are still largely independent of individual direction or control. A name will "take" only when it satisfies some popular sense of congruence with the concept. For most Americans, apparently, as no doubt for most Europeans, the central reality of the war is that it is the second catastrophic struggle of world-wide proportions within a single generation. But this is not to say that there is necessarily any permanence to the designation "Second World War." Most of us, we dare say, feel much too close to the terrible reality of the war to understand its full historical significance and thus to know or even to guess what name the historians will give it.

Hopping To Germany

Of all the R. A. F. raids on Germany, the one on Augsburg will unquestionably rank as the most daring air exploit of the war. Twelve Lancaster bombers swept clear across France and some hundreds of miles into Germany flying 20 to 30 feet above the ground. Four were shot down en route to the objective, three more were lost over the objective, and the remaining five reached home safely. Twenty of the 35 men who completed the mission have been decorated—the decorations including a Victoria Cross for the flight leader, and a Distinguished Service Order and Distinguished Flying Crosses and Medals for 19 of his associates. Such prodigality of decoration is most unusual, and indicates the nature of the men's achievement. Usually the bomber command is reluctant to release flight details of its forays, or to sanction unstinted praise of crews.

In this instance, however, we are given a more or less complete picture of what happened—with emphasis on the courage and will power shown. The losses sustained were, of course, very great. They were so great, in fact, that the wisdom of such low flying on similar missions is dubious. Yet it is only fair to point out that German morale is hardly likely to be improved by the prospect of thousands of Allied bombers sweeping overhead at roof-top level. Whatever the tactical lessons of the Augsburg experiment, the flight was the very quintessence of R. A. F. daring as the enemy has come to know it.

FOR LOVERS TODAY

Now take my hand and let us sit
At dusk beside the sea:
Come cloud or no the stars are lit
And dawn wakes presently.

There is no word that we can say
That has not once been said,
And we who feel so live today
At birth with death were wed.

Hold close my hand in warmth of yours,
All flesh is formed of one,
And this frail pulse of faith endures
When hand and hand are done.

Reincarnation

That the birth rate is on the increase in our own as in other countries becomes daily more apparent. Official statistics have now also begun to bear out the fact that in this, as in all major wars, there is a big increase in births.

Another interesting fact, not often noted but readily verifiable, is that a majority of the babies arriving on the planet earth in war eras are males.

Scientists record these phenomena but only students of metaphysics understand their significance, namely that young souls slain prematurely in battle, are eager to reincarnate at the first opportunity and get back into a physical material body.

For this reason, as well as for many others, war is as futile as it is wicked and cruel.

Those that are responsible for the infliction of suffering and death, must by the inexorable operation of Karmic law themselves suffer a similar fate in another life.

Wise men like Ghandi have learned this truth and nothing can sway them from their doctrine of passive resistance to violence.

Those temporal rulers of mankind who have abused their might by forcing their subordinates into the present hellish nightmare will loose their powers when the dead begin to haunt them.

Draftees' Dependents

Both Congress and the War Department seem undecided on what to do for dependents of men to be inducted into the military service.

Suppose we settle the matter this way: Cut off the salaries of these politicians and officers. Pay them at the Army private rate of 75 cents a day. Then let them and their families and dependents make an attempt to live on the pittance allotments under consideration.

It seems an inexcusable miscarriage of justice to ask these draftees to make the supreme sacrifice that some of them are bound to make and at the same time quibble over an extra few dollars a month that would relieve them of the anxiety for the welfare of their families and dependents.

Place the minimum allotment for a home at $50 a month. Allow $10 a month for each dependent up to five. These dependents don't seek to gouge the taxpayers. They merely beg the opportunity to live at what the Administration has many times referred to as a substandard level.

National Lottery

Everyone knows that our national debt is fast assuming astronomical proportions. Far-sighted individuals are becoming increasingly alarmed over the prospect of our Government being forced into bankruptcy. Bankruptcy would, of course, destroy the very cause for which we are fighting—national freedom!

In order to avoid bankruptcy, our obligations must be paid. In order to pay our obligations we have, in the past, borrowed more money. But no individual, no business, no country can continue to borrow money if its obligations become greater than its ability to pay. This financial law cannot be ignored.

Our country is, at present, financing the greater part of its war efforts through the sale of defense savings bonds. Sooner or later these bonds must be repaid with interest. The Government also raises funds through the various forms of taxation. Money derived through taxes does not have to be repaid. There is a limit, however, to the amount of tax burden that the public can successfully carry. If the tax burden becomes too great a complete breakdown in our entire tax structure will result.

Various solutions to our financial problems have been presented, none of which has proven entirely satisfactory. The legalizing of a national lottery has certain merits but the word "lottery" is objectionable. For example, the game known as "Lotto," derived from the word "lottery," was never really popular with the public until the name was changed to "bingo."

Since it is imperative that the Government raise more funds for the prosecution of the war, it is my suggestion that Congress enact a law setting up a national victory fund. This fund would be governed by a board of directors empowered to issue what would be known as "Victory Shares" at least once monthly. All shares would be numbered consecutively and sold to the public at a specified figure. All monies derived from the sale of these shares would be placed in the victory fund, and during the month following their sale the board of directors would hold a public drawing, after which 50 per cent of the net proceeds would be paid out to those shareholders whose numbers were drawn. The money remaining in the fund would, of course, be used to further our war efforts.

Some may disapprove the foregoing plan on the basis that it is gambling. Let us remind such individuals that Uncle Sam now holds a seat in the greatest gambling game the world has ever witnessed. Our freedom, our homes, our very lives are at stake. Are not these priceless possessions worth more than our money? If so, we had best back up Uncle Sam's wagers with a national Victory Fund and thereby win this war as quickly as possible. How about it?

$25,000 A Year

The greatest reformer of modern times spoke again. The income of Americans in these times, said he, should not exceed $25,000 a year. How true and necessary. Your proposals, Mr. President, mark another stepping stone toward rearranging our entire economic structure. We need hundreds of reforms like these. It is the only practical and intelligent solution to our problems. The whole of mankind will ultimately and inevitably settle to that. All other isms will be destroyed. No man is worth more than $25,000 a year, anytime, anyplace. Not even presidents or kings. It is too much money in the hands of few and no money at all in the hands of millions that is spoiling this country. Let us hope the measures will have the support and the approval of Congress.

Restrict The Foreign Language Press

For the second time within a quarter of a century the exigencies of war have brought to the fore the question of the foreign-language press. In no other country in the world has freedom of the press been as much a reality as in the United States; in no other country in the world has it been allowed to flourish as in this country.

There is no denying the fact that in the main the foreign-language newspapers and periodicals have been loyal to America and have tried to interpret honestly the meaning of American life to their readers. But since World War I a great many publications have shown themselves to be unworthy of the hospitality extended to them by this country, of the liberty which they enjoyed under the liberal laws of this land. Many of them became tools of foreign organizations, many more of them became direct mouthpieces of alien causes and ambitions—causes and ambitions designed to destroy the democratic institutions of this country and all other countries of like traditions.

There is no lack in apologists for our foreign press. The fight against censorship of that press during the last war was bitter and it promises to be just as bitter this time. That the present menace of world domination by forces far more sinister than those of the late Kaiser is staring our country in the eyes, they do not deny; that the danger from subversive elements within the country is far more formidable than a quarter of a century ago, they dare not deny. Why, then, is our hearing dinned with the hue and cry of those who would permit the foreign language press to carry on business as usual?

The foreign language press at best has done irreparable damage to the land which has tolerated it. As a former immigrant who had come here with one English word in his vocabulary—"street"—as one who for years had lived and worked with immigrants from many lands and many climes, as a former immigration official and investigator for the Department of Labor, I know whereof I speak when I say that the foreign language press has done a decided disservice to the United States in affording the immigrants a line of least resistance and preventing them from exerting themselves to study our language, to master our way of life and become thoroughly Americanized.

The fact that over 15 millions of aliens had lived here for years and failed to become American citizens, the fact that millions of them have remained alien to our traditions and our way of life despite the opportunities offered them to become part and parcel of our free life is conclusive proof that in reading their foreign language press they were kept tied down to the countries whence they had come, to the traditions of their homelands. The foreign language press has helped keep them in ignorance of our country, has helped to keep our population heterogeneous, and has contributed much towards the slowness with which the melting pot has done its work.

If there had been no foreign language press, hundreds of thousands of the immigrants would have felt compelled to go to our night schools, as some of us have done, and would have quickly become Americans in spirit and in action. No, there is no reason why any one of us should shed tears over the establishment of a strict censorship over the foreign language press for the duration of the war. And when the war is over and tens of thousands of immigrants are once more admitted to this country, some law should be enacted compelling such immigrants to attend school during the first two years of residence here, unless they can pass an examination in English, in civics and American history.

Tom—Hear the latest?

Dick—What is it?

Tom—(Leans over very confidentially)—Something's in the wind.

Harry—(Hoarse whisper)—No kidding!

(Tom motions for both soldiers to draw closer. He glances around quickly to see if anyone is listening.)

Tom—The quartermaster just got in a shipment of fur-lined helmets, mackinaws and galoshes.

Harry—Yeah?

Dick—Alaska.

Tom—See how much you know? You don't know anything.

Dick—All right. What's your guess?

Tom—Guess! Listen, sonny. This is no guess. I know where we're going. I got it all figured out.

Harry—Okay. Okay. Where to?

Tom—(In a soft, slow, drawn-out tone) —The North Pole.

(Silence. Complete confounded silence.)

Dick—They going to give us mittens, at least?

Harry—What are we going to do up there?

Dick—Did the Eskimos sign up with Germany?

Tom—Okay, wise guys. I'm trying to tell you something. You want to hear it or not?

Dick—Sure, Tom. Leave him alone, Harry.

Harry—It sounds pretty silly to me. Besides . . .

Tom—Is that so! Well, listen, wise guy, that just shows how you keep up with things. Don't you realize the strategy of such a move? Don't you realize that from there we can easily hop into Norway and Sweden? Look at the map and see for yourself. And here's something else. Yesterday I was in the office and I saw the major going over a lot of maps. Of course I wasn't close enough to see what the maps were. But all of a sudden he looks up and says to me: Jones, you know anything about the North Pole?

Dick—(Wide-eyed)—What'd you tell him?

Tom—(Impatiently)—What could I tell him? Do I know anything about the North Pole?

Harry—Listen, what are you guys knocking yourselves out for? The major asked me the same thing.

Tom—He did? When?

Harry—Yesterday. Only I got close enough to his desk to see what he was working on.

Tom—(Excitedly)—What map was it?

Harry—It wasn't a map. It was a cross-word puzzle. All he wanted to know was if Eskimo was male or female.

(An astonished look comes into Tom's face while Dick starts to laugh.)

Harry—And, incidentally, for your information I'd like you to know that the quartermaster also got a supply of short cotton pants and camouflaged mosquito nets and I also heard that we're getting shots for malaria and yellow fever.

Dick—Wow! We sure made a fast hop, didn't we?

Tom—You mean we might go to Africa?

Harry—I heard the Belgian Congo.

Tom—I don't believe it. It doesn't seem practical. Besides the way Sergeant Smith talks we're all set for the Philippines.

Harry—Yeah? Well, I was in a crap game the other night and everybody agreed that South America was the next stop.

Dick—(To Harry)—I thought you said we were going to the Belgian Congo. (To Tom)—And I distinctly heard you say the North Pole.

Tom—I still think we're going to the North Pole!

Harry—And I'm convinced it's Africa!

Tom and Harry together—Where the heck do you think we're going?

Dick—(Rising and sighing)—Well, I don't know where you guys are going, but I'm going to bed.

Reluctant Americans

The ways of government are puzzling to common folk. For years the common people wondered about the wisdom of government that would permit a potential enemy to drain our land of war junk that is now being used to blast the life out of our soldiers and sailors. For a year or more it was risky for a farmer to allow a plow or the carcass of an old automobile to stand in his fields. Tons of iron, aluminum and copper junk were being hauled to boats on the way to Japan. Yet we knew that ever since we classed the Japanese as undesirable immigrants and favored the European foreigner we insulted them and they awaited only the most propitious time to strike back. But for business and the dollar we continued to sell potential bullets, airplanes and battleships.

Now for a little while we were respecting the rights of our enemies to patents, many of which would help us defend ourselves. Some of them were owned by German interests. We knew full well that the unscrupulous Hitler, whose U-boats and bombers respect no rule of war or peace, would never respect these cartel arrangements. Yet we were about to haggle to protect the right of some of our big business to monopolize some patented process, until the President by right of his powers smashed the ring of vested interests.

Right now we are allowing the press of one kind to publish propaganda and advocate policies bordering on sedition because we want to protect the liberties of the press as a whole. Fortunately at last we are beginning to awake and marshall the masses and public opinion to render harmless these enemies within.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Western Front

LIPPMANN

SOME TIME has passed since Hitler forced Marshal Petain to accept Laval, and since General Marshall was in London. During this time the Royal Air Force has opened up a Western Front in Europe. For the British offensive can no longer be regarded as a series of hit-and-run raids on military targets. It is assuming the character of a direct challenge to the German air force to rise up and fight for the command of the air. The outcome of this battle in the air will determine whether there can be a Western Front this year in the sense of a landing in western Europe.

For if, and only if, the Nazis are driven out of the air, can ships with large forces of men, tanks, and artillery approach the coasts. The question is whether the British can do over Europe in 1942 what Hitler failed to do over Britain in 1940. Invasion across a water barrier can only follow, it cannot precede, the mastery of the air. The land operation depends upon the success of the campaign in the air, and the outcome will be much affected by what we do, by the risks we take deliberately, and by the sacrifices we impose upon American civilians in order to concentrate our shipping and our naval forces so that the British reserves of air power grow larger and not smaller as the great aerial struggle rises to its crisis.

IT WOULD be a grievous mistake to think that diplomacy has no part in this year's campaign. There are now three fronts in the European war—the Eastern, the Mediterranean, and the incipient Western. On all of them diplomacy has much to do, and under no circumstances must the whole burden of the struggle be placed on the fighting men. Under no circumstances must we be terrified into diplomatic inaction by morbid anxiety, or by a feeling of moral inferiority that only the enemy knows how to conduct political warfare.

For it is evident that in the west of Europe—that is to say in France, Italy, and Spain—political action predominates over military. None of the three great Latin nations is a seriously active belligerent. All of them are torn within themselves by the fact that the official policy is contrary to the instinct and will of the people. All of them have divergent interests. Yet since none of them is a free and independent state, all have a paramount common interest in regaining their national independence.

IT IS not necessary, therefore, to pay any attention to reports of popular unrest in Italy and France in order to know that these two nations must move away from Berlin as the Nazi power weakens. This means a great deal. It means that the tendency of the Axis coalition is to dissolve under the pressure of the natural and permanent interests of the nations that are now entangled in it.

Our diplomacy, then, has a clear field in which to operate because what we want from the French, the Italians, and the Spaniards is only what they want for themselves. If we had to persuade them to violate and sacrifice their real interests, we should surely fail unless we learned how to use lies, corruption, and terrorism as Hitler has used them. But all that any of the United Nations wants of the Latin powers is that they should be independent and their people free according to their own national conceptions of freedom. Therefore, we can and should continue to have political relations with them, whatever happens in regard to ambassadors and the formalities.

THE FACT that Italy may not now be ready or able to enter into peace negotiations with us should not, I believe, deter us from proposing peace seriously, concretely, and sincerely to Italy. The fact that Mussolini will reject it should mean nothing to us since we should make it plain that, of course, we are not offering peace to Mussolini and never shall. For Mussolini is the man who stabbed France, Albania, Yugoslavia, and Greece in the back, and sold his country to the Nazis.

The fact is, however, that Mussolini is not Italy. There remains in Italy the King and the dynasty. There remains an army which is not blackshirt. There remains the Holy See. Unlike Germany, where all the ancient institutions of the state are badly ruined, the essential institutions of Italy have survived. A peace can, therefore, be negotiated, and eventually it will be.

THE ITALIAN PEOPLE have amends to make to the Greeks and to the Yugoslavs for the crimes committed in their name, and by making amends they will restore their honor. But otherwise there is no unabridgeable gulf between the Italians and their present enemies, and there are besides ancient bonds of friendship and of interest. We know quite well why the Italians have not fought well in this war, that their hearts have not been in it. We know too that the natural destiny of Italy is not to be the vassal of her traditional enemy north of the Alps but to be a power in the Mediterranean. Neither Great Britain, nor Russia, nor America has any interest in denying to Italy a leading place in the Mediterranean world, and to an Italy which has rid itself of Mussolini and his Nazi connections they would have every interest in assuring that leading place.

They would, moreover, be bound in their own interest to open up to Italy relief and the means of reconstruction. For the Italy with which we can and in the end will make peace must become strong in order to assure its internal peace and its national independence.

OUR PROPOSALS to Italy will make it plainer to M. Laval that his ambition is quite clearly understood: that what he is seeking to do is to make France the instrument of Nazi power over the Latin and Mediterranean world. His unmistakable purpose is to substitute himself for Mussolini—to change the Rome-Berlin axis into a Vichy-Berlin axis, and then backed by the Nazi power to dominate the whole western Mediterranean—Italy, Spain, and North Africa.

This plan, if it succeeded, would be as destructive to Italy and Spain as it is to France herself. For as France finally lost her independence, the two other Latin nations would also lose theirs. A Nazi France would place Hitler in full control of the Mediterranean world. Spain would be helpless and Italy would not only be threatened from across the Alps but actually surrounded on all sides by the Nazi power.

THESE CONTROLLING truths cannot be suppressed by propaganda or by terrorism. For they correspond to the realities of the Latin world and to the national instinct of the French, the Italians, and the Spaniards. We should never cease, therefore, to make it plain that we have grasped these truths and that our policy is governed by them.

Then the front which the airmen are opening in the West will become, as it must eventually be, a main theater in the war of national liberation.

Canadian Plebiscite Proves Poll Accuracy

With the correct prediction of the results of last Monday's plebiscite in Canada, modern sampling polls proved their accuracy.

In the course of covering more than 100 elections in recent years, an average error of less than 4 per cent has been achieved in election poll forecasts.

Two days before the election the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, using procedures developed by the American Institute of Public Opinion, forecast correctly the results of Monday's plebiscite. A comparison of the poll forecast with the actual results follows:

CANADIAN POLL FORECAST
Yes vote in plebiscite	68%
No vote in plebiscite	32
ACTUAL PLEBISCITE RESULTS
Yes vote	64.5%
No vote	35.5

Price Ceiling

By Janet R. Keith

Government Headache

Ottawa.

AN OVERALL price ceiling will be a simple enough affair for the American consumer to cope with. He will suddenly find that the price of everything he buys has been frozen, and as long as he reports any illegal rise in prices to the Government, he will be doing his part. But for producers, manufacturers, importers, wholesalers, retailers, it will be a different story. Many of them will find themselves "squeezed" between rising costs and fixed selling prices, and naturally they'll cry to the Government for help. That's the point at which the Government's difficulties will start!

If a dealer finds that his costs of production have risen and yet he is forbidden by the Government to sell for higher prices, he must either go broke or get financial assistance from somewhere. The logical source of assistance is a Government subsidy. In Britain, where there is not yet an overall ceiling on prices, the Government paid out subsidies of 125 billion pounds last year in order to stabilize the cost of living. In Canada, where a price ceiling went into effect last December, government subsidies have proved to be an essential feature of price control.

THERE WILL undoubtedly be much criticism in the United States, as there has been in Canada, of the policy of granting Government subsidies to industry and business. Last week the Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Canadian minister of finance, tried to explain to the Canadian people why such a policy is both necessary and justifiable.

A government cannot control and hold down all of the costs which enter into the prices of goods and services. Whenever costs rise beyond the amount which industry can absorb with fixed prices, there are three possible courses of action. The goods may disappear from the market, the selling price may be allowed to poke up through the ceiling, or the producer may be subsidized to the extent of his increased costs. Canada has allowed many nonessentials to disappear, but there are certain basic essentials whose cost price has risen. Determined not to puncture the ceiling, the government's only remaining choice has been subsidization.

Imports are the most important class of goods whose cost cannot be controlled. Canada, for instance, has not been able to prevent higher prices and higher costs of production in the United States and the United Kingdom, from which two countries she obtains a large variety of imported goods. Nor has she been able to control increased shipping and insurance rates. She has, therefore, been forced to subsidize importers of certain classes of goods. Imports are paid only on consumers' goods and materials to produce consumers' goods. They are not paid on capital equipment, nor on goods for reexport, nor on goods imported for war production (which, of course, the government purchases ultimately). And, of course, subsidies are not paid on a large group of items listed as "nonessential."

THERE ARE bound to be "borderline cases" of goods which seem essential to some and nonessential to others. There was for a time a controversy in Canada over the merits and demerits of canned grapefruit juice, with nutritionists and home economists joining in the fray. The final decision was that grapefruit juice is worth importing, and subsidies have amounted already to over $70,000.

Only a small number of domestic subsidies are being paid in Canada. In some cases goods which were being sold by retailers during the basic period last fall had been produced several months earlier. Meanwhile production costs had risen. When the retailer ordered new stocks he found that he had to pay a lot more for them, and yet he was forbidden to increase his selling price. In order that the retailer should not have to bear all of this "squeeze," the government has arranged that the producers and dealers shall help to absorb the increased costs. Technically this scheme is known as "rolling back the squeeze." In cases where the producers and dealers cannot possibly absorb all the increased costs, the government has absorbed part of the "squeeze" by paying a subsidy.

In a few cases the government has had to subsidize producers in order to ensure an adequate supply of an essential commodity. Notable examples have been milk, domestic canned fruits and vegetables.

Actually consumers are the only ones who benefit from the payment of subsidies. Although the payment is made to producers or dealers for the sake of administrative convenience, it is passed along until it has the ultimate effect of lowering the consumer's cost of living. A subsidy is of no advantage to the firm receiving it except insofar as it enables the company to continue in business and operate under the price ceiling. In fact it is a fundamental principle that the industry receiving a subsidy should bear a part of the increased costs in respect of which the subsidy is paid. In other words, the business which must apply for a subsidy is bound to be left in a worse, not a better, profit position than before the price ceiling was imposed.

The Canadian government hopes to reduce the need for domestic subsidies by reducing production costs through simplification. Subsidies insure current supplies, but the program of simplified practice now being worked out should permit many subsidies to be discontinued in the future. There is no reason to suppose that the government will sink deeper and deeper into a system of subsidizing vested interests. During the first five months' of operation of the price ceiling, subsidies totaled only $2,125,000. Although it is difficult to estimate future requirements, the Canadian minister of finance has mentioned an arbitrary figure of 50 million dollars for this purpose during the coming year. As he pointed out, this sum is insignificant compared with the evils which would result from uncontrolled inflation.

Burma Oil Field Battle

By Darrell Berrigan

Associated Press Staff Writer

Witness Tells How British Elude Trap

SOMEWHERE in Burma, April 19 (delayed).—A weary, battle-scarred British imperial army has just escaped a death trap in Burma's oil capital of Yenangyaung in one of the most violent, reckless battles of the war.

Four of us noncombatants rode into Yenangyaung just before midnight on the 16th, while "scorched earth" explosions still rang out in the oil fields, in time to see the outcome.

To understand the background of this battle, it is necessary to recall that these imperials had been fighting a losing, withdrawing battle for three solid months, over some 600 miles of the wildest country on earth.

THIS WAS THE SCENE at Yenangyaung as the four of us rolled down the hill into the blasted business section.

The power plant had just burst into flames as a little Englishman, in charge of the demolition, set off his last explosives. He intended to blast an outlying ice plant, but the Japs got there first.

At a place where the road dipped into a deep canyon, a company of soldiers halted us and said the Japanese had slipped across the road north of Yenangyaung and set up three machine-guns on the south bank of the Pinchaung River. A second party of the enemy had crossed the river and established another road block on the secondary road from Yenangyaung through the village of Twingon. The British were trapped. There were no roads leading east and the wide Irrawaddy blocked them on the west.

The garrison commander set a double guard, notified his division commander of the situation, and decided to wait until morning to make plans for breaking out.

We went to the commander's residence, a huge mansion perched high on the bank of the Irrawaddy.

Early in the morning we moved on and found the division commander, bearded and tired, but with blue eyes still sparkling, sitting under a bench under the locust trees at his makeshift headquarters on a stud farm 2 miles south of Yenangyaung.

FROM 7:30 until 9:20 a. m., on April 17, Japanese planes circled continually overhead. Enemy bombers twice bombed the transport line stretching for 3 miles along the road, completely exposed to attack.

I learned that afternoon—running up and down the hills under a blazing sun—to curse those airplane motors as much as the troops who scrambled up and down with me, hugging the dusty earth when the "crrummp" of exploding bombs echoed across the wasteland.

All day long the general sat under his tree, infrequently taking additional shelter from the planes, patching up an army from the weary remnants of his force. Late in the afternoon he ordered the withdrawal of his troops to a narrow box canyon opening on the Irrawaddy where, although the position was vulnerable to attack, his men could find the water so absolutely necessary to their carrying on the fight.

STANDING beside the road with the general, I watched the exhausted warriors return from the day's battle.

Indian soldiers, driving a two-wheeled cart pulled by a mule and wearing a leafy camouflage, answered by query, "How're you doing?" with a shrug and words in Hindustani that seemed to say "What CAN we do?"

Troops, mules, horses and ox carts poured in, filling the tiny grove of fruit trees in the box canyon, three miles down river from Yenangyaung.

After dinner the general held a council of all his staff officers, outlining the plan of the next day's attack. The seriousness of the situation was increasingly evident. Ammunition was running low and rations were completely gone except for rice for the Indians.

THE MEN KNEW then they were going out to die. They were in a reckless mood that night.

They pulled out packets of food they had been hoarding for weeks and had a last square meal.

They knew that even if they did get out the feat would only be recorded as another British retreat in the disastrous Burma campaign. But they were not bitter. They had fought the best they could. They would fight their best again tomorrow.

In the dim light of dawn troops moved silently into Yenangyaung as the spearhead of the attack to drive the Japs from the road junction in the north end of town.

Other troops formed in dusty khaki lines and marched eastward, for another attack against the encircling Japanese lines.

IN FRONT of us, three big fires still burned in Yenangyaung and a strong west wind laid a smoke-screen over the city.

A chatter of Japanese machine-guns echoed over the hills, punctuated by the deep roar of mortar explosions.

The battle was on.

The task was to clear the Japs from the two roads leading north from Yenangyaung. One block had been thrown across the western road, just north of the town on the south bank of the Pinchaung River, and the general planned that this should be cleared for the transport train to pass.

The main attack was delivered on the eastern road, on the north bank of the Pinchaung a mile beyond Yenangyaung.

From a split-trench, covered against air attack or stray shells, I watched the fighting.

AT NOON mountain batteries started a barrage as preparation for the attack of our Chinese allies got under way to the north. For five minutes, a steady stream of steel howled over our heads, bursting like distant thunder among the Japs in Yenangyaung.

Then silence.

We waited half an hour in that deathly gap, lying under tanks, then the hills ahead broke into life. Machine guns, rifles, mortars and artillery echoed and re-echoed across the hills. The infantry advance had begun.

Finally we got orders to make a break for it. Tanks led the way out over an ox trail. They carried riflemen in case there was too much opposition.

We left the main road, broke through a fence and rumbled down the steep hillside to enter narrow-rutted cart tracks covered with dust—toward freedom.

(Here a long section of the dispatch was censored and Berrigan picked up his story of the retreat in a dispatch filed April 22.)

British crews in American tanks, after cracking through a Japanese road block near Taungdwingyi, now are patrolling 50 miles on the highway to the west, leaving the invaders only a narrow, roadless salient up the Irrawaddy Valley to supply their forces attacking the Allies south of Yenangyaung.

(This apparently was after the Chinese had occupied Yenangyaung, and the surrounding area, after rescuing the British. Taungdwingyi is 55 miles southeast of Yenangyaung.)

The Gallup Poll

Handling of Draft in Their Communities Called Fair by 88% in National Survey

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 1.—Americans from coast to coast are handing bouquets to the Nation's draft boards for their fairness and impartiality in managing the greatest draft of manpower in American history.

Composed of civilians who work without pay, the draft boards have handled the registration of America's entire adult male population up to 65 years of age, and the induction of several millions into the armed forces. For the efficiency of this work they are winning the praise and confidence of nearly 90 per cent of the American population.

Few programs in the Nation's history have ever received such an overwhelmingly favorable vote.

The views of the people on the work of the draft boards have been collected in a coast-to-coast poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion, in which this question was asked:

"Do you think the draft is being handled fairly in your community?"

The results show not only that the country as a whole is satisfied, but that persons who have had a husband, son, father or brother drafted are just about as satisfied with the operation of the draft as anyone else.

The vote is:

National Vote
Think draft has been handled fairly	88%
Think it has not been handled fairly	12

Approximately one person in every six (16 per cent) said he had no knowledge of the situation or was without an opinion.

On a comparable basis, the vote of those who have a member of the family in the armed forces is:

Think draft has been handled fairly	85%
Think it has not been handled fairly	15

The vote of the general public by geographical sections is given below:

	Handled Fairly	Handled Unfairly
New Eng. & Mid.-Atl.	88%	12%
E. Central	85	15
W. Central	84	16
South	90	10
Far West	91	9

Each person interviewed who expressed dissatisfaction with the work of the draft boards was asked to give his reasons.

Gen Lewis B. Hershey, head of Selective Service who deserves major credit for having set up the present system, will be interested to know that the criticisms do not fall into any one category in such a way as to indicate the need for any major policy change.

Rather, the criticism given by voters in the poll springs from information of a first hand or second variety about particular cases.

Some claim that the boards show favoritism, make deferments that "look queer, and allow people to escape service who should be inducted." A few criticized the draft boards for "taking too many good workers from industry and leaving the loafers."

Some likewise felt that the boards are drafting too many married men in proportion to the total and not enough single men.

In the farm areas some people interviewed in the poll said they felt their local boards were taking too many men from the farms who should be deferred because they are doing essential work.

Price Ceiling

Q. I need some aspirin tablets and am in an argument with the druggist. My May 1 headache is away above the level of my March 15 headache but the druggist won't put the price of his headache pills down to the February 10 level. What should I do?

A. If you think you have a headache you should see Mr. Henderson.

• • • •

Q. My delicatessen dealer refuses to sell me a dozen eggs at the March levels. He says eggs are exempt. When I ask on what grounds he says they are exempt because they are so old they have dependents. Is he right?

A. He should know his eggs.

• • • •

Q. My suit presser only charged me 75 cents to press a suit last month. Now he wants $1. Can I win the argument?

A. Nobody can win an argument with a tailor. And he can always refuse to put his suit pressing rate back to the March, 1942, level on the ground that the wrinkles in your pants now exceed even the October, 1929, levels.

• • • •

Q. I want my ceiling painted. Is there a ceiling on ceilings?

A. No, but we can get you under the head of stepladders.

• • • •

Q. I am a poet. I just asked the editor for $10 a poem (up to three pounds, dried); He will only give me $2.89 under the new ceilings. I claim I am exempt from such ceilings. He says this is nonsense; that my poems come under the designation of baloney. Who is right?

A. Having read your verse we don't see why we should put a ceiling on hayforks and not on your stuff.

• • • •

Q. The druggist just charged me an extra dime for razor blades. He says he never heard of the ceiling and that, besides, my beard touches the floor. What do you advise?

A. You might try an acetylene torch.

• • • •

Q. I see that there is a ceiling on diapers. Is this justice?

A. As long as there are no diapers on the ceiling why squawk?

• • • •

Q. My landlord refuses to cut my rent. He says he is exempt as he is not in a defense area. I claim all landlords should come under the ceilings established for laundrymen. They all give me a dry cleaning. Have I leg to stand on?

A. It has been held by some courts that landlords come under the same rules as trappers.

• • • •

Q. I can't understand why their should be a ceiling in steak, pork, chops and ham and not on lamb, fish and chicken. What's the situation here?

A. You can avoid worry here by just ordering hash. You will then get a little of each with no price conflicts.

• • • •

Q. I want two pounds of liver, a claw hammer, five gallons of gasoline, a floor broom, a bottle of castor oil and a studio couch. What are the ceilings here?

A. Don't complicate matters. You can have just as much fun with a chuck steak, one mackinaw, some boric acid, four eggs, a can of tomato juice, an ironing board and a bicycle tire.

• • • •

Q. I want some insecticides at the March, 1941, level for some May, 1942, roaches. The dealer says the roaches are the same ones I had in December, 1940. We don't seem to get anywhere. What say?

A. You will probably save time buying some sugar, a hammer and a handsaw. It takes longer to get a roach that way but it is more exciting.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Peace Plans That Aren't Sensible

SOME of our best minds have been toying with a great brotherhood of peoples under a rule of justice to be enforced, of course, by us and our partners in the role of military victors and I would like to throw in my opinion that they are either crazy or just being politicians. If our side wins the war, Russia will plan the peace of the European continent, and on the basis of all Russia's past performances we can confidently assume that in Germany it will be a peace not much different from that which Hitler has imposed on Poland. Russia will not be asking our advice or permission any more than she is consulting us now in the conduct of the war and our own people will pick up their marbles and come on home to be more nationalistic than ever, but very militaristic, too.

PEGLER

As a Nation, we simply aren't inclined to world brotherhood. We are strictly loners as we demonstrated after the last war when we turned our backs on Europe and Woodrow Wilson. Notwithstanding whatever it was that Mrs. Roosevelt said about what the American fighting men did when the other war was over, it was the whole American people who renounced Europe. The American Legion had very little influence except in lobbying up pensions and the bonus and annoying people with riotous goings-on at the national conventions.

THE PEOPLE were fed up on "Europe's endless wars," as the phrase went, but made the mistake of rejecting Wilson's alternative stated over and over in his dying effort to swing us into his dream league. The alternative was that we must become a Nation in arms with more or less universal compulsory military service. We turned down his league because we felt sure that we always would be running to a hen-house fire in the Balkans with a leaky hose and a celluloid ladder, but we also got plastered on jake and jumpsteady and, as drunks will, thought we could lick any half-dozen you-know-whats in the house with no more training than a haircut and a shave.

In all this time our nationalism hasn't diminished a tenth of a degree, but we surely have discovered in the last couple of years that we can learn to shoot and march and fly as well as anyone else when we put our mind to it and I think we are going to enjoy the feel of being tough so much that we will keep in training indefinitely, with plenty of divisions, planes, ships and war industry.

Furthermore, we will have to keep tough because if our side wins that means Russia wins and there is a nation with no friends, brothers or confidants, a mysterious, mighty giant who will be shoving communism all over the place. If we can learn to be as single-minded and selfish as Russia about our own national safety we will do very well and we certainly should try to learn to keep our secrets about inventions, methods, supplies, capacities and so forth because Russia and Germany did that while we were showing off our toys with the vain, silly pride of little kids.

ONE of our high aviation officers was saying recently that when those Russians flew over to drop in on us a few years ago and we showed them all our stuff, which wasn't much in bulk but rather special, one of the Russian officers said he just couldn't understand why we did this. He said we showed him things that he didn't even ask to see, whereas, in Russia, they never showed us anything and our people knew it would be useless to ask.

Russia, like Germany, has rubber boundaries which stretch and contract, and wherever they stretch to, there communism is. I just don't believe our people ever will go for communism or collaborate sincerely in a postwar world arrangement in which one of the dominant powers is communism. Moreover, collaboration has got to be reciprocal and we won't be willing to go on furnishing all the reciprocity while Russia just grunts.

You may say this is a very sordid and pessimistic writing and not an alternative plan. Of course, it is no plan, but no plan is at least as good as any plan which calls on us to share world responsibility with a nation which shares nothing but her troubles with anybody.

The situation permits of no planning. The immediate business is to lick Germany, which having been done, Japan will be a push-over.

The future will have to be managed as it happens and the stronger we remain when the war is over the better we will manage it from the standpoint of the only country that should matter to Americans of the U. S. A.

Did you ever hear of any nation wanting to protect us?

All-India Party Again Hits British

Allahabad, India, May 1 (AP).—The committee of the All-India Congress Party adopted a resolution today condemning the arrangements of the British authorities for evacuation of Indian refugees from Burma and previously from Malaya and demanding that there be no racial discrimination.

Indians have charged that Britons have been given better facilities in the exodus from territory overrun by the Japanese and that Indians have been barred from certain routes allotted to Europeans.

The resolution urged that speedy arrangements be made for removal of Indians still in Burma trying to get home.

Brave Malta Takes It and Dishes It Out

By Preston L. Grover and William McGaffin

(Editor's note: The brave Island of Malta, recently awarded the George Medal by King George for its heroism, is a thorn in the Axis' side and its defense is one of the epics of the war. Preston L. Grover and William McGaffin, Associated Press and Wide World war correspondents, visited the island with the British fleet, neither knowing the other was there. Later they met in Alexandria and collaborated on the story of Malta which appears in the current issue of Life Magazine. The following story is a condensation.)

This is a view of part of Valletta, capital of Malta, from the air. Britain's naval and seaplane base in the Mediterranean is 50 miles off the southern tip of Sicily and is the world's most heavily bombed spot.

THE most heavily bombed spot in the world is not London or Chungking or Tobruk or Corregidor but a little British island in mid-Mediterranean. Malta, 8 miles wide and 17 miles long, has been bombed more than 2000 times.

It has the heaviest concentration per area of antiaircraft guns in the world, on the land and on board ship.

From 150 to 200 Axis planes strike at this British carbuncle in Mussolini's sea every 24 hours. Even the goats and donkeys on the rocky hills have learned to crouch in a ditch when the bombs begin to fall.

The attack began on the early morning of June 11, 1940, the day after Italy entered the war, just before France surrendered.

Malta was not ready. It had coastal defenses, but it had no fighter planes and no properly defended airports. However, there were four Gladiator seaplanes awaiting shipment in a dockyard storehouse.

They were not, even then, the best fighters Britain had, and they were designed for aircraft carriers. There were also at Malta four seaplane pilots. They had never flown fighter planes. But they took on the defense of Malta.

The four met wave after wave of bombers. They fought all day. They came down only to refuel, repair and take on ammunition.

Many thought Malta could not be held. But the performance of the four Gladiators changed that. One Gladiator was shot down but the remaining three fought on for three months, sometimes grappling with forces ten times their number. The Maltese called them "Faith, Hope and Charity." Now, two years later, Malta has great numbers of Hurricanes and Spitfires, long-range bombers and terrific ground defenses.

GERMAN pilots, compelled to bail out over the island, report the ack-ack barrage paralyzing. "When we took off," said one captured German pilot, "we had no idea what we were getting into."

Veterans of both battles, Malta and Britain, tell you that Malta is worse than Britain ever was because the fighting is over a much smaller area. It is almost impossible to make a forced landing on the island—and the Jerry patrol is on constant watch to strafe any launch trying to rescue pilots down in the sea.

The MacArthur of this Bataan is "a man with a Bible in one hand and a sword in the other."

Gen. Sir William George Shedden Dobbie, 63, is so pious he hates like the dickens to fight on Sunday, but he has to. He is a big, lumbering man with a full English face, pink cheeks, white hair and mustache. He regards this war as a crusade.

His troops call him "Old Dob Dob." Otherwise he is referred to as "he" or "his excellency" for he is governor as well as commander in chief. Only his wife calls him "Will."

Dobbie was born in Madras, India. As an officer in the Royal Engineers, he fought through the Boer War, the Irish "trouble" and the first World War. He literally ended the World War, for it was he who wrote and signed the order for the armistice as a member of General Haig's staff. Dobbie was governor of Malaya for a time before the war. His daughter and wife are with him at Malta. His two sons are elsewhere in the army.

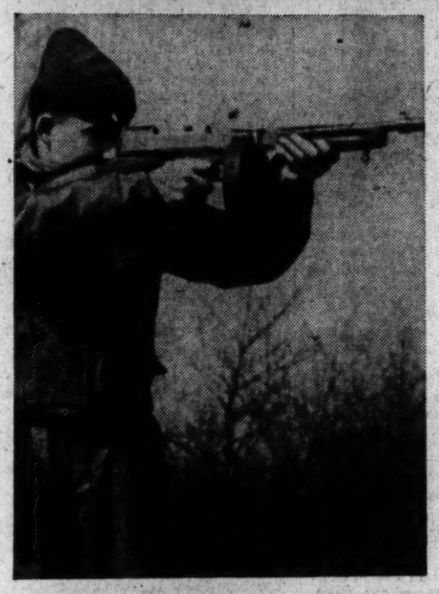

IN the beginning some British were skeptical about the complete loyalty of segments of the Maltese population. Italy had conducted vigorous propaganda in Malta for several years, giving scholarships to many Maltese students and cheap travel facilities to their parents.

When Italy entered the war and it became certain that the feeding of Malta would become a problem, women and children of the English colony moved into navy and army barracks for protection against any possible disorders. It was a needless precaution.

The first Italian bomb which fell on Malta so enraged the islanders that pro-Italian sentiment either died completely or was afraid to show its head.

Malta is almost one solid village. There are 10,000 farms on 95 square miles. Of important assistance to its people in withstanding the nonstop blitz is the marvelous system of shelters. Experts agree they are the world's best.

Cool Pique for Warm Days

Trim Figure and Alert Posture Best Aids to Career Woman

By Ida Jean Kain

STOUTNESS is no particular handicap in a man's career. It is apt to be viewed as a sign of prestige and proof that he is getting on in the world. But with a woman, it is just a sign she is getting on in years and is giving up hopes of romance.

Every girl who gets anywhere starts off with ability, some training, a trim figure, and the fresh good looks of youth. Even though hard work may count for most in the climb up, a girl's a fool to discount entirely her personal appearance. The woman who maintains a neat and tidy waistline and a superbly erect posture carries an air of alertness that is recognized and appreciated.

You may get by but you won't get as far as you should with some regard for caloric control and calisthenics. Your diet should be the protective kind that makes for plenty of reserve energy along with slimness. You have to eat and you might as well eat the right kind of foods. There's no law compelling you to exercise. But if you skip it altogether you will gradually lose out in looks and efficiency. When your muscles get soft your mind is apt to go stale.

Exercise Regularly

To get exercise regularly, plan to take it either early in the morning before you dress or after 5 o'clock in the afternoon at some good gymnasium. Since you have very little time for exercise, your daily half-dozen should really do something for you. Here is an excellent foursome for waist, stomach, hips and shoulders.

1. To trim the waist, sit on floor with legs straight and wide apart, and stretch arms overhead with fingers interlaced and palms turned outward. Pull up with midriff muscles and, bending forward at waist, circle trunk down, around and up.

2. To flatten the stomach, get down on the floor on the knees and fold the arms under the forehead. Weight should be rested on forearms and knees. Forcibly contract the abdominal muscles so that the lower back is rounded. Hold, relax. Repeat 10 counts.

3. To slim the hips, stand in a doorway with hand resting on door frame at side for support. Swing alternate legs from hips, knee straight up in front and away up in back. Swing for 25 counts, rest, then swing other leg.

Straighten Shoulders

4. To straighten shoulders and also improve bust contour, stand erect with elbows bent and out at sides, fists clenched, chest level. Jerk elbows backward, 10 counts. Do this without letting head poke forward or abdominal wall sag.

Those four exercises will give you a good start toward getting into trim.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to use that length of material which is not quite large enough for a dress. Make the yoke and sleeves of contrasting fabric. In this way you can take advantage of the bargain prices of less than dress length remnants

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Wife Feels Socially Suffocated Because Husband Forbids Her to Wear Slacks or Shorts; Says He'll Divorce Her if She Does; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem deals with slacks and shorts. I am a young married woman, 25 years old. I have been married for two years and my husband is 20 years my senior. We go around with five or six couples and the other wives wear slacks, on suitable occasions, but my husband objects to slacks for me. He says they look "terrible." (But I notice that he looks closely at all other girls in slacks. In fact, he never lets a girl get past without looking her over, no matter how she is dressed. And if she has on slacks or shorts, he actually turns around for a final look. And still, he tells me that women in slacks look "terrible!")

Now, when a group of us are together on Sundays, with the other five women wearing slacks, I feel dreadfully dowdy done up in a dress. Also, when I play tennis, my husband forbids me to wear shorts,—even on the court. No slacks, either. I must wear a dress,—which makes me feel "out of the picture" and ruins my game. I realize, of course, that he was trained in "the old school,"—and he is a dear, kind man, who treats me like a baby. Furthermore, I don't think girls look well downtown in slacks, on Sunday evenings; but I feel it is a different matter when one is going on a picnic or playing active sports. In such instances, I think shorts and slacks are casually correct.

I have always been up-to-the-mode in my manner of dress; have worked and paid my own way since the age of 16, and always heretofore relied on my own judgment in personal matters. But now I just don't know what to do. I frequently threaten to resign my office job and work in a defense factory, where slacks are a "must;" but my husband says if ever he catches me in public in shorts or slacks, he will leave me! Once I bought a pair of "bare midriff" lounging pajamas (very becoming), which I had on one day when my husband came home. He raised cain. I said, "Well, I am at home; not on the street." He snorted, "Well, if you start wearing them at home, you will soon be wearing them in the street—." (That is just a sample of his general attitude.)

I must wear a dress even when bicycle-riding; and you know what a bother that is. My husband carps about dress lengths, too. He thinks I should wear mine below the knees! You may think this problem is pretty silly, but it is worrying me sick. I am beginning to feel like a prisoner, because I cannot dress as my women friends do. I feel like a dodo, and it's getting me down. Should I leave my husband? Or stay, and dress as I please? And if we split up on the issue of slacks, wouldn't people think it mighty queer? Sincerely, D. H. G.

According to His Lights, Man Means Well

DEAR D. H. G.: It is generally supposed that women's clothing is designed to captivate men's imagination. But the current craze (among women) for shorts and slacks ought to disprove that supposition. Every man I know, who is temperamentally disposed to love, honor and cherish women (in chivalrous, sentimental ways) is inexplicably offended (even repelled) by the spectacle of a woman in slacks.

For instance, one man stated his feelings this way: "Fancy making love to a woman in slacks! It's a bit incongruous." Another man (a Frenchman, whose profession has to do with beautifying women) said, when asked what he thought of women in slacks: "What would YOU think of a man in a dress?" And a psychiatrist, to whom I turned for an explicit, impersonal translation of the male reaction, began his reply by speaking in what he described as "broad general terms," explaining that it would be "unfair" to permit his "personal bias" to intrude.

When I had pinned him down as to "personal bias," it developed that his detached, intellectual grasp of "both sides of the question" leaves his fundamental, personal reaction intact. And that reaction is unfavorable to women in slacks—whom he vignetted in language both comic and devastating. Stepping out of the role of disinterested analyst of manners and mores, he submitted the private opinion that a woman in slacks (no matter how lovely and lithe-limbed) rates about zero in romantic come-hither, as compared to a woman dressed in subtly flowing garments, half concealing, half revealing, mysteriously intricate—which, since the dawn of civilization, have symbolized to trustfully literal-minded man the virginal shy charm and supernal wisdom of spirit he aspires to find in his "better half." It goes against the male grain, the psychiatrist makes clear, to be called upon to revere a creature in slacks. Thus clad, a woman looks too much like a caricature of man himself to evoke the poet in his nature, and set him to dreaming beautiful dreams.

Seeing the ladies so co'ent with themselves in slacks, despite their men's displeasure, one can only conclude that women dress with defiant reference to some restless inner urge to escape, whenever possible, from a tiresome role of subordinate sameness,—by bursting forth upon life's stage in an impudently new-fangled get-up, that seeks to express a further facet of resurgent adventurousness containe in their infinitely complex, creative nature.

It appears that, given almost any plausible, broad-scale pretext for sampling new fashions in behavior (of which dress is but the outward expression), they act en masse to please themselves, tacitly challenging the male of the species to accommodate to the visual effect as best he can; but secretly, humorously confident that in time he will acquire a taste for what he sees. And, in the main, that is what comes to pass, after a generation or two of "conditioning" treatment. Think back to the days when "bobbed hair" was a bitterly contested innovation, for instance. And cigarette smoking, as a feminine practice.

However, to come to grips with your specific problem: Your husband's attitude toward slacks-on-women is morbid, definitely. In pronouncing them 'terrible,' yet insistently ogling all women who wear them, he contradicts himself, you think. But no. Feminine contours thus bluntly presented to view arouse his lascivious instincts,—which is precisely the reason he prohibits such garb for you. Assuming (as he does) that all men's thoughts are chiefly carnal, he wishes to shield his wife from similarly brutish speculation,—and so is austerely moralistic in censoring your wardrobe.

In his own peculiar way, he is manifesting great protective devotion to you; and if you cared as much for him, I believe you would find more pleasure in pleasing him than you would in wearing slacks, just because they're "the rage," and all your women friends do. As for shorts on the tennis court, Helen Wills never wore them. She was as famous for the ultra-feminine elegance of her trim pleated tennis dresses, as for her brilliant game and cool reserve of manner. Dress as she did, and your game need not suffer. The same costume would do nicely for bicycling,—since the all-in-one outfit has a "shorts" foundation.

About dress lengths: You say, aggrievedly, that your husband favors them "below the knee,"—as though that were a preposterous preference. But most fashion experts back him in that. They tell us that the most graceful and flattering short skirt length for the individual woman, is achieved by adjusting the hemline level with the calf of the leg, at the point of largest circumference. So, thinking things over, I believe you may garner more social profit, in the long run, by acceding to your husband's sour-puss notions of proper wifely dress, than you would by repudiating him in favor of slacks.

Severe Hair-Do Gains Popularity

A glance about Hollywood reveals a trend toward more severe hair styles, possibly part of the new move toward shorter, smoother coiffures. Lynn Bari really goes severe in a new film, sweeping all her dark hair straight up from the sides and back, the ends tucked in on her crown. Front hair is dressed in a high, severe pompadour. Smart for tall, slim brunettes.

Jane Wyman is also wearing her hair in a fairly severe coiffure for one scene in a new picture. In this sequence she wears a dressmaker suit of black wool, unrelieved by any color. Hat is a codified sombrero, also without trimming. Only color accent is her blonde hair, which is brushed down smoothly all around, turned under a smooth, shining roll.

Best Man's Duties

Query—At a 7 o'clock evening church wedding what would be the best man, both before, during and after the wedding?

ANSWER—The best man is one of the most important fixtures of a wedding and turns out to be a "jack of all trades." He helps the groom plan his bachelor's dinner a week or so before the wedding and makes sure ths groom has thought of his toast to the bride and remarks for the occasion.

Jane Driscoll

The best man's job includes being sort of a personal valet the entire day of the wedding. He checks on the marriage license so that it will not be mislaid. He makes certain the groom has a new bill for him to present the clergyman. He is an expressman to see that the groom's bags are packed for the journey and that they, along with his going away clothes are taken to the bride's house so that they will be on hand after the reception. At the bride's house he also sees that the bride's bags are stowed away for the journey and consults with the bride's mother for extra details.

Before the wedding, back at the groom's house he is again personal valet. He finds lost collar buttons (or better still has extra ones supplied) and dresses the groom—including the arranging of his tie, pin and boutonniers. He takes the wedding ring from the groom and puts it in his own pocket to be produced at the proper time. (An extra ring is often a lifesaver if one drops during the ceremony.)

The best man finally arranges to take the groom to the church 15 minutes before time and gives him a final inspection before he steers him to the altar. During the ceremony he takes the groom's gloves and produces the ring, as prearranged in the rehearsal at the church the night before. He also sets the groom straight if he forgets to pledge his troth correctly. And while the wedding party is leaving the church, he presents the clergyman with the fee. There being no stipulated amount, the fee is judged according to the size of the wedding and the amount is usually presented in an envelope.

Although selection of the ushers and best man is the duty of the groom, the best man in turn takes over as chief of the usher staff, appointing one man as head usher who will take over his duties at the reception as well as at the wedding. If the bride and groom are traveling by car (doubtful in these times), the best man arranges their bags compactly. If the trip is by train, he buys the tickets and takes the baggage to the station beforehand.

Best Man's Wife

Query—What would the best man's wife wear at a formal evening wedding, or is she excluded?

ANSWER—The wife of the best man certainly is not excluded from the wedding, but she is considered as one of the women guests. As, such, she would wear an evening dress of the dinner type and a head covering, if the church requires one.

Civilian Usher

Query—Is it possible to have a military wedding when one of the men, an usher, is not in the service?

ANSWER—At one time it was thought necessary for every man (the best man being an exception, if necessary) to be in the service in order to have a military wedding. Times are less formal now, however. Sabers were abolished about two months ago in the Army so there is no longer the unsheathing to form an arch of steel for the bride and groom to pass through. For this reason, a civilian usher would be less conspicuous along with uniform men and would be perfectly in order. The Navy still use sabers, however.

How to Wash Bathroom Tiles

When was the last time you washed down the tiled walls of the bathroom? If you haven't done it recently you are probably in for an embarrassing surprise, because the tiles are likely to be covered with a film of dust that has been gummed firmly to the glazed surface by the action of the steaming bath water.

The best way to remove this film is by the simple soap and water method. Fill a pail with good hot suds, and wash the tiles with a large sponge or soft cloth. When all the stain has been washed away, rinse the tiles with clear warm water, and wipe them dry with a clean soft cloth.

If the tiles are given this treatment once a month the cleansing can be done with little effort. When left too long, the removing of the dirt requires the application of considerable elbow-grease.

Two Diplomatic Parties Accent Capital Calendar

Minister of Canada, Brazilian First Secretary Entertain at Late Afternoon Events

Two late afternoon parties—both in Diplomatic Corps households—accented the social calendar yesterday. The Minister of Canada and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy entertained 200 guests at the Canadian Legation, and the Brazilian First Secretary and Mme. de Alencastro-Guimaraes gathered in a smaller group at their home, 3141 Thirty-fourth Street.

The Canadian Legation party was in honor of Maj. Gen. Maurice Pope, Canadian representative in the war cabinet committee, and Mrs. Pope.

A variety of spring blossoms decorated the spacious drawing room, where the Minister and Mrs. McCarthy received. Standing with them were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Pope, and Mrs. John McCarthy, daughter-in-law of the host and hostess.

Guests included heads of missions, a number of officers of the United States Army, military attaches of other embassies and legations of the United Nations, and a few State Department representatives.

Gayly informal from first to last was the 5:30-to-7:30 fete given by the Alencastros. "It's a farewell party—but only farewell for a while," said the host, who went on to explain that he and his wife will be off by motor on Tuesday for a month's vacation in Mexico. In view of this virtually everybody at the party had some suggestion to offer as to what should be seen and what must be seen in the country south of the Rio Grande before the Alencastros return to Washington.

Receiving wherever she happened to be Mme. Alencastro was trimly turned out in a floor length blue and white print which was set off with coral beads and a matching clip. Guests arriving promptly at 5:30 found themselves lingering on at the pleasant party until time for dinner. A number stayed even longer.

Mme. Martins Preparing Exhibition of Her Sculpture

Among those arriving during the first half of the fete was the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins. Before he bade goodby he must have answered at least fifty times the question, "Where is Mme. Martins?"

His reply was that Mme. Martins was in New York completing plans for an exhibition of her sculpture on May 11. She will return to Washington today and will go back to New York early next week. The Ambassador, meanwhile, has a few plans of his own. On May 11 he will receive an honorary degree at Rutgers University, and early in June he will be accorded a similar honor by the University of Syracuse.

Among the guests who were special centers of attention at yesterday's party were the new Assistant Military Attache of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Paul Bardy. They arrived in Washington last week and spent most of yesterday afternoon being introduced to other guests at the party.

Child Conference Holds Attention of Mrs. Burke

The Brazilian Embassy staff as a whole was well represented at the party. To mention but a few of those present—there were the Minister Counselor and Mme. Lobo; and the Second Secretary and Mme. Gouthiers.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke were there, and Mrs. Burke was telling friends that her chief interest at the present time was the Pan American Child Conference which opens here today. Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union, was among those present at the party; and still others there included the Argentine First Secretary and Senora de Scilingo; Don Mario Rodriguez, the Chilean First Secretary; Maria Frias, Mrs. Thomas Dawson and her daughter, Miss Lilita Dawson; Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Nagel; Mme. Hasslocher and her son, Ivan Hasslocher, whom one guest thought was Archduke Otto at first, and many more.

Friday Evening Club Has Final Dance of Season

A round of festivities led up to the final meeting of the Friday Evening Dance Club last night, when guests attended a series of cocktail parties before the dance at the Willard Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ellison entertained at a large cocktail party before the event. Mrs. Parker West assisted Mrs. Ellison at the fete, which also took place at the Willard. Among the other cocktail hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bangs.

Mr. and Mrs. John McClure were among those entertaining friends at the supper dance. Among their guests were Justice and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Representative Katherine Byron, Col. Don Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hallett.

Alice Helen Amrin Is Engaged

The ceremony is not until June 6, but Miss Alice Helen Amrin has already the outline plans for her wedding at Anacostia Methodist Church in mind. She will become the bride of Frank Fisher Tew, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Tew of Washington, at 8 o'clock that evening.

Mrs. Thaw Is Wed to Mr. Landa

Beverly Hills, Calif., May 1 (AP). Statuesque Consuelo Morgan Thaw became the bride today of Alfons Beaumont Landa, Washington attorney, at the home of her brother, Harry Hays Morgan, jr., who gave her hand and acted as Landa's best man. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt (Gloria Morgan).

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. E. Robertson of the Beverly Hills Presbyterian Church. Afterward there was a champagne supper during which the couple enplaned for Mexico City on the first leg of a honeymoon trip that will take them to Havana and Palm Beach. They will make their home in Washington, where Landa is the law partner of Joseph Davies, former Ambassador to Russia.

The drawing room of the Morgan home was a mass of white blossoms, gladioli, stock and Easter lilies. The bride wore a smart navy blue and white print, large navy blue hat and a corsage of white orchids. About her neck was a string of perfectly matched pearls. Her engagement ring was a large diamond.

Mrs. Vanderbilt wore bois de rose and black silk print, small black Russia tiara in turban effect, with pearls her only jewels. Pale pink orchids topped the outfit.

Thelma, Viscountess Furness, Consuelo's other sister, wore a shell pink and black one-piece dress, large black hat, pearls and a corsage of pale pink camellias and pink orchids.

The wedding was the first occasion at which Gloria, Thelma, Consuelo and Harry Morgan had been together in six years. Consuelo gave her sisters wrist watches. Young Tony Furness came here from school in Santa Barbara for the wedding, and Edmund Lowe, constant escort of Thelma, also was present.

Argentines Suffer Few In-Law Problems Despite Practice Of Several Related Families Living in One Home, Speaker Says

IN-LAW squabbles are practically nonexistent in Argentina. Often as many as five daughters or sons marry and return to the paternal household. There under one roof, they live peacefully and happily with their many children. This is the observation of Mrs. Corine Menges Machetzki, guest speaker yesterday at the annual meeting of the Washington Council of Church Women at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation on East Capitol Street.

"Mutual consideration and innate courtesy are the secrets of the Argentines' happy household relationships," said Miss Machetzki, whom I interviewed between the chicken salad and ice cream course at the luncheon yesterday. "American families would do well to ape the Argentines in this practice," she added.

Even in cosmopolitan Buenos Aires, women still live a secluded life behind locked gates and high barred windows according to the missionary, who worked for many years in various parts of the country. She is now on furlough and is living in Philadelphia.

"Despite the Argentinian women's shut-in existence, they live and dress beautifully," explained Mrs. Machetzki. "Never have I found more graceful and gracious hostesses."

As for the Indian population, she found them living simple, hard-working lives. The Paraguayan Indians who live at Iguazu near the Brazilian border work on tea plantations and the women usually smoke long, black cigars.

"Contrary to popular belief Argentinan women are club conscious—that is the cultured, educated ones," said Mrs. Machetzki. "Also, they are becoming increasingly interested in organization activities." She cited one outstanding women's club in Buenos Aires—the "Associon Las de Madres" (Association of Mothers). This club does a tremendous amount of charitable and civic welfare work.

North Americans make the mistake of living in exclusive clubs or communities when they go to Argentina. They seem unwilling to mingle with the people of that country and band together in groups from the United States. Also they seem unwilling to find anything good about the natives, according to Mrs. Machetzki.

MOVIE STARS were absent from the Washington City of Hope Chapter of the Los Angeles Sanatorium's annual member-bring-a-member tea yesterday held at the Willard Hotel. Nevertheless, Rosa Warner Charnas of Beverly Hills and New York, who is a sister of the famous Warner Brothers, Hollywood producers, was on hand.

Mrs. Rosa Warner Charnas

Mrs. Charnas is a former president of one of New York's largest sanatorium auxiliaries. Back in Los Angeles she is a constant visitor at the City of Hope there. Also, she works diligently to keep it going. Yesterday she supplemented with a talk a picture that the Warner Brothers had made on the activities, patients and staff of the sanatorium. She told of the immediate improvement in a young Government worker's condition who has been sent from Washington to the sanatorium for treatment.

Bob Pace, radio singer, also was a special feature of the program at the tea, which netted 45 new members. Also the Washington chapter presented a large-sized check to Mrs. Charnas to be turned over to the City of Hope Sanatorium.

Mrs. Max Cohen was chairman of the tea. Pouring at the tea table were Mrs. Saul Steelman, Mrs. Rhea Brill, president of the Washington City of Hope Chapter, and Mrs. Julius Lully. Mrs. Carl W. Linker arranged the program.

Doings of the Day

Junior Jewish Consumptives Relief Society holds annual fashion show and dance at the Washington Hotel. . . . Miss Carolyn Matthews of Neighborhood House speaks before members of the Dollogy Club at 1 o'clock luncheon, 1644 Connecticut Avenue. Miss Matthews spent sometime in Syria at the American University of the Near East Foundation. Her topic of the day is "Syria as I Know Her and Her Dolls." . . . Washington Club gives usual monthly bridge party followed by tea, 2:30 p. m. . . . The Beta Eta Chapter of Alpha Xi Delta at the University of Maryland begins its second day session of the biennial province convention. Morning meetings are devoted to business and reports, but a banquet followed by a model initiation supplants business in the evening. Tomorrow an initiation breakfast will end the three-day convention.

'Bundles' Party Friday

NOW THAT recently organized Bundles for America is "just about beginning to get an enormous number of articles" for their clothes bank, a number of friends of the cause have been invited to a party Friday afternoon to "show off" the progress that has been made since the organization was conceived about four or five months ago.

Money for the party is not coming from bundles coffers, of course, but is the gift of a special, but anonymous, friend. The fete will take place at headquarters at 1710 Connecticut Avenue at 5:30—after the shop closes and after the flower mart at the Cathedral.

Women Voters Back Program Of President

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 1.—The National League of Women Voters adjourned its fifteenth convention today with adoption of a wartime program in support of President Roosevelt's policies for prosecuting the conflict, curbs on inflation and work to establish a just postwar world-organization.

In addition, delegates passed resolutions to promote the election of capable Congressmen and to concentrate the league's efforts on relating local government to the necessities of wartime in a "vigorous summer campaign."

The convention adopted a resolution stating that "the most important issue before the country during the next few months is the election of a Congress competent to deal with the problems it will face."

Public Discontent Cited

Noting an increasing public "discontent and unhappiness about the caliber of public officials," the resolution charged league members with working to build public opinion which will demand candidates with the following qualifications:

1. A first interest to win the war regardless of political, sectional or special interest, and who recognize that there can be no compromise with Fascism.
2. Ability to know Fascism at home when they see it and proven devotion to a democratic solution of the governmental problems they face.
3. Demonstrated understanding of the part this country must play in an interdependent world and the responsibility of the United States to share in building a free and stable order which eventually will include all peoples regardless of race, religion or political persuasion.

Inefficiency Assailed

A second resolution called for a summer campaign to relate local government to the necessities of wartime, "fighting inefficiency, graft and extravagance."

The convention added two final topics to its active list for study, legislative support and opinion-making during the war emergency: 1, Economy in Federal, State and local governments wherever it does not impede the war effort or curtail essential services and standards; and, 2, curbing inflation through price control, rationing, curtailing purchasing power and fullest use of resources.

In the final session of its three-day meeting, the league reelected Miss Marguerite M. Wells of Minneapolis to her fifth two-year term as head of the organization.

Mrs. R. T. H. Halsey of New Haven, Conn., was named secretary. The other officers were reelected—Mrs. D. Bailey Calvin of La Marque, Tex., former secretary, was named to the board of directors with Mrs. Marion A. Cheek, jr., Snyder, N. Y.; Mrs. Louise Leonard Wright, Chicago, and Miss Ruth Mitchell, Minneapolis.

Soldier Blasts At Policy on Casualty Lists

By International News Service

Chicago, May 1.—One of the great human documents to come out of the war, a letter written by an American soldier in Australia, blasting the delay in issuance of casualty lists, was made public by the Public Relations Department of the Ninth Naval District tonight.

The soldier's identity was not revealed. He wrote:

"Sirs: What kind of a country is it that will send a man out to die for it, yet when he has had his guts blasted out, the simple fact that he died for his country is such unpleasant news that it must not be published back home for fear of 'undermining the morale' of the home folks?

"I'm just another one of these guys who's got a $21-a-month job with Uncle Sam. I spend my time learning how to kill Japs and Germans. It's my job.

"I'm doing the best I can, and I don't have much time to think. But I'll be ——— if I can figure out what the Government means when it announces that casualty lists can't be published because they are 'depressing.'

Sees Opposite Effect

"Maybe I'm wrong, but it seems to me that when a guy has done his best and died in some jungle or desert trying to save decency for the world, surely his country could allow him one line in a newspaper to inform the fellows in the office back home that he did all he could do.

"It seems to me that the American people would want to know the names of the fellows who stopped the bullets and bayonets, and it looks to me like the effect would be just the opposite of 'undermining' the morale.

"For myself, I'd like to know the name of every American bucko who's had the honor of dying by the side of a soldier like MacArthur. I'd like to salute those guys individually, and if the list is 10 pages long, it won't depress me a bit. It'll just make me want to get at the enemy a little faster.

Calls for Explanation

"I'd like to believe that if the Japs knock me off in Australia, the newspaper back home will announce the fact, not as any tribute to me, because I won't know anything about it anyway, but just so the fellows who knew me will know that one guy from a red hill in Georgia somehow found the courage to stay in there and fight.

"The Government says the announcement of my death would scare the folks back home, 'depress them, and make them want to fold up and quit.' But, by God, I don't believe it's true.

"If I'm wrong, I wish you'd explain it to me, so I can understand it. But if I'm right in believing that the casualty lists should be printed, and that my folks can still take it, then I hope you'll do what you can to set the fellows down in Washington straight.

"I'm fighting for my kind of folks here in America, and I'd like to think that when they hear that the Japs got me, instead of folding up and quitting, they'll send a thousand more guys right behind me to do the job I couldn't finish.

"Sincerely,

"AN AMERICAN SOLDIER."

The letter was released coincident with the announcement that the first Navy casualty lists for the Midwest will be released within the next few days. Next-of-kin notifications have been the only source of casualty news, and even the death of Capt. Colin P. Kelly, jr., has not yet been officially released to the public.

Hains Point Site Sought for Service Men

A site on Hains Point near the old Washington Tourist Camp is being sought as a location for 49 cots obtained from the former 4-H Club encampment for service men on leave here, the servicemen's housing committee was told yesterday.

Two hundred and sixty cots, procured from the same source through the intervention of Mrs. Roosevelt, probably will be transferred to the Fort Dupont CCC camp on Minnesota Avenue near Ely Place Southeast, where there are quarters for 300 men. The tents will be taken to Fort Dupont only if space nearer the downtown district is not found. The 4-H camp, north of the Tidal Basin, is not available because it lies in the path of the Independence Avenue extension to Memorial Bridge.

The committee, which met yesterday in the District Building, was told that the tourist camp vicinity was "ideal" because the Army is taking over the tourist spot itself, and the nearness of the men on leave to the regular camp would be convenient.

Court Suspends Schenck's Term For Tax Evasion

New York, May 1.—In return for aiding the Government in the investigation which led to the conviction on extortion charges of William (Willie) Bioff, deposed labor leader, Joseph M. Schenck, former chairman of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., had his three-year prison sentence for income tax evasion suspended today in United States District Court.

Tomorrow morning, however, Schenck will surrender to start service of a year and a day term imposed on him today after he pleaded guilty to one count of another indictment, charging perjury and the making of false statements. The 62-year-old former motion picture head admitted that he made a false statement to a revenue agent about a loan of $100,000 to Bioff, which figured prominently in Schenck's income trial last year.

Arlington Girls' Auxiliary Wins in Drill Competition

The girls' auxiliary of the Cadet Corps of Washington-Lee School, Arlington, Va., couldn't get to a competitive drill with Anacostia and McKinley Tech High Schools yesterday but nevertheless managed to walk off with first and third prizes in the competition.

Inability to secure bus transportation kept the Arlington girls at home, where they went through their paces at noon before Capt. Daniel B. Lloyd, Lieut. George Hawkins and Lieut. George Wahler, military instructors at Roosevelt, Western and Central High Schools, respectively.

Earlier the trio of judges had watched two companies from Anacostia and one from McKinley on the former's parade ground, and then after seeing the Arlington exhibition awarded the following prizes:

Company I, Arlington, commanded by Nina Barton, first.

Company K, Anacostia, commanded by Nancy Stevens, second.

Company L, Arlington, commanded by Norma Joy, third.

Ribbons were presented each member of the two winning Arlington companies and members of the second-place Anacostia outfit will receive theirs at a special assembly Monday.

This is the second year of the competition, although last year McKinley did not participate. Last year's awards, incidentally, were the same as this year's: first and third to Arlington, and second to Anacostia.

Commando Chief Of St. Nazaire Raid Is Held Prisoner

London, May 1 (AP).—Lieut. Col. A. C. Newman, 37-year-old Commando officer who led the March 27 raid on St. Nazaire, is a prisoner of war, his wife was informed tonight.

Newman, a former middleweight fighter, was last seen by his comrades as he jumped ashore from the explosive-laden destroyer Campbeltown just before the former American warship was blown up in the dock gate at the Nazi-occupied French port.

"Newman went ashore although he must have known chances of his being evacuated were remote," said one of the St. Nazaire raiding group. "We tried to persuade him to remain on our launch and direct the operations, but he said he could better rally his forces for what looked like a desperate fight in the face of overwhelming odds."

The strike, called suddenly this morning, had been certified to the WLB a short time earlier by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

(Giraud has been reported in Vichy since his escape via Switzerland, but Vichy officials have refused to confirm or deny his presence there.)

Whereupon Groucho Marx, irrepressible, commented: "I've heard reports about the lack of rooms here, but this is the first time I knew they were letting them sleep in theaters."

Cab Firm Opposes Pick-Up Plan

Diamond Concern Gives Many Reasons Why Service May Hurt War Effort

Twenty reasons why the Independent Taxi Owners Association, which operates Diamond cabs, should not be compelled to participate in the pick-up service were submitted to the Public Utilities Commission last night—just a few hours before the deadline when the participation would have become mandatory.

Contractual obligations and emergency transportation requirements were the principal objections of the company. The taxi industry and the P. U. C. alike have awaited this response to the P. U. C.'s "show-cause" rule since Diamond operates nearly a fifth of the District's 5400 cabs.

The concession at the Union Station, for which a $15,000 faithful performance bond is posted, was declared by the company to be so important to its business that "for this reason if for no other, these respondents should not be required to participate in the pick-up service."

Excludes Two Zones

The pickup ruling requires that all cabs shall, during the rush hours of 7 to 9 a. m. and 4:30 to 6:30 p. m., take on from one to five passengers bound in the same general direction downtown in the morning and outbound in the afternoon. The rate for such rides is 20 cents per person for rides from zone two into zone one in the morning, from zone one into zone two in the afternoon, and from any two points confined to zone one at either period.

Since the order requires that all cabs shall participate in this service, the Diamond's petition held that no cab service could be given in zones three and four during that time, since these zones do not figure in the arrangement, and that cabs would be forbidden from operating concessions and emergency calls.

Besides the regular concessions, at the Union Station and various hotels, the Diamond operates many charge accounts, which it considers in the light of emergency service.

War Effort Involved

Among these are:

1. Sibley Hospital, which could involve emergency transportation of doctors and nurses, and the Veterans' Administration for the transfer of veterans.

2. The British Air Commission, and the Canadian and Australian Legations, all of which frequently demand cabs for trips of such urgent and confidential nature that it would "impede the war effort if the pick-up service impeded these missions."

3. The Pennsylvania Railroad which uses Diamond Cabs to transfer train crews from the Terminal to their yards. "These are emergency trips," the petition stated, "and may involve the movement of troops."

4. The Capital Transit Co., which uses the cabs to expedite their service during traffic tie-ups and storms.

Cites Service to Ill

The company asserted that cabs are used more often than ambulances in taking sick or injured persons to hospitals, clinics and doctors' offices. It points out that an expectant mother, for example, may have to be rushed to the hospital at the height of the rush hour. The cab would have to stop along the way to pick up four other passengers, if the PUC order is put into effect.

For the consideration of its passengers, the Diamond company maintains that in the "semi-private" confines of a cab, the chances of pickpocket activities and the making of improper advances toward women are increased.

Servicemen in uniform use taxis for making hurried trips between train, rail and plane connections, and in the interest of national defense cannot be forced to rely upon mass transportation. Members of Congress and other Administration figures are often on hurried trips which cannot be delayed by the pick-up service, the petition continued. It asks how passengers may be taken to the airport.

Denies Public Satisfied

Drivers themselves who are now operating pick-up service are dissatisfied, the report stated. The public itself is none too satisfied—therefore the commission should have another public hearing on the success of the plan instead of forcing other companies into it.

The risk of liability of the company toward its passengers will be increased by the pick-up service, the company complained, asserting that excessive accident costs have put more cab companies out of business than any other factor.

But the company's chief concern was the Union Station concession, both in the loss of the company's $15,000 bond, and the slowing up of transportation at a vital center which is as jammed at the rush hour as any place in town.

The commission announced that it would take the matter under advisement. Until further word, the Diamond Cab will be permitted to remain out of the service.

Two other companies which requested hearings at the vote of the drivers, the Blue Light and Bison companies, also are exempted from the ruling until further notice. Several associations which did not respond to the PUC's demand for adequate reason why they should not offer the pick-up service must offer it automatically tomorow at 7 o'clock.

3000 Beauty Lovers Attend Fourth Annual Flower Mart at Washington Cathedral

GENERAL VIEW of the fourth annual Flower Mart held yesterday on the Pilgrim Steps of Washington Cathedral. Proceeds will go to the upkeep and beautification of the Bishop's Garden and other gardens on the Cathedral Close

More than 3000 persons—largest crowd in the history of the event—yesterday visited the fourth annual flower mart on the Pilgrim Steps of Washington Cathedral.

The function, sponsored by the All Hallows Guild for the maintenance of the Cathedral grounds, was under the general direction of Mrs. George Garrett.

Prize for the most attractive booth among the 14 garden club entries went to Miss Rosalind Wright and her committee, who had arranged a pink and white double-tiered table of boutonnieres. It was the third consecutive year that a boutonniere booth won first laurels.

The tea table, with the historic box of the Bishops Garden as its background, and featuring yellow flowers and decorations, was adjudged the second most attractive booth. Mrs. Owen Roberts, wife of the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, presided there.

Honorable mention was given to the Difficult to Run Garden Club booth which featured plants for window boxes; to the Rockville Garden Club, with its attractive display of potted plants and unusual tiles; to the Trowel Club, with its gay yellow cart full of jellies and small potted plants, and to the garden gadget booth, in charge of Mrs. Charles McNary, which was decorated with colorful garden gadgets ranging from English walking sticks to twine wound in the shape of dolls.

Judges were Mrs. Harlan Stone, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison and Nathan Wyeth, architect of the District.

The hat-decorating contest attracted much attention late in the afternoon, with Mrs. Curtis Munson walking off with first prize for her chapeau made of two cabbage leaves and trimmed with a small yellow squash, string beans and green ribbon. Mrs. Richard Croft's creation of cabbage leaves and green peppers won second prize, and Mrs. Walter White's bonnet of a pineapple top with white bridal wreath was the third selection of the judges. Mrs. Atherton Richards, Mrs. Clifford Mallory and Clifford Berryman, cartoonist of the Evening Star, were judges of the event.

Auto Sharing Rally Spurned By Army Band

Although Thursday's "Share Your Car" mass meeting is being held to further the President's request that Government workers economize on transportation, the Army Band has refused to play for it—"as a matter of policy"—for which the musician's union claims responsibility.

The "policy" is that no band in any of the services, Army, Navy or Marine, may accept engagements which would conflict with the employment of civilian units, according to Capt. Thomas Darcy, director of the Army Band.

As a matter of fact this policy is an actual Army regulation (250-5, section 4), which was passed in 1916 at the bequest of the Federation of Musicians, said Alfred Manning, secretary of Local 161 of the American Federation of Musicians.

Captain Darcy said that the mass meeting, sponsored by the District Traffic Department, is not in itself objectionable to the Army. It just doesn't fit into the list of occasions when it is "legitimate" for the band to play.

These occasions include any function on an Army post, and any patriotic organization in national convention. That is, the American Legion could get a service band if a national convention were to be held here, but not if it were a local, or only regional meeting.

Although Captain Darcy said this practice was only "a matter of policy which is not for publication," the actual regulation was later found in the Army regulations.

The Marine Band played last week for two days at a rummage sale on Seventeenth Street—but that was for the Army, Navy and Marine Relief, so it was all right.

When it was pointed out that the mass meeting would offer no competition to any professional musician, as a high school band will be the probable alternative, Darcy said that that did not affect the policy.

He emphatically denied that the union had any part, coercive or persuasive, in the formulation of the policy, but Manning was equally assertive that the protests of the federation back in the First War days caused the regulation to be adopted.

Meanwhile Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Joseph B. Eastman, War Transportation chief, were invited to attend the mass meeting, which the Department of Vehicles and Traffic hopes will serve as a model for the Nation in promulgating the President's request for pooled transportation.

John Collyer, president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., and Arthur Newhall, coordinator for rubber for the War Production Board, also have been asked to attend the meeting, which will be in the Departmental Auditorium at 7:30 p. m.

A 30-minute motion picture, "Keep 'Em Rolling," which shows the damage done to tires by poor driving, and the best ways to conserve them, will be the main attraction.

Murphy to Speak At Pleasant Plains

A mass meeting will be held by the Pleasant Plains civilian defense area at 8 o'clock tonight at Bannaker Junior High School. Chief Air Raid Warden Murphy will speak and motion pictures of bombed areas will be shown. Mrs. Velma G. Williams, president, will preside.

Salvage Supplies 80% of Paper Now in Use, Expert Declares

Joseph Viener of the Institute of Scrap Iron and Steel last night told residents of the Sixteenth Street Highlands defense area that 85 per cent of the paper and 50 per cent of the lead and steel used today come from salvage sources. The meeting was held in the Calvin Coolidge High School, Fifth and Sheridan Streets Northwest.

Mrs. Michael Nowinski of the American Women's Volunteer Service gave a brief talk on the plans being made to use high school students in harvesting the crops and helping on farms now that much of the farm labor has been taken into the Army.

A motion picture of fighting incendiary bombs concluded the program, which was presided over by Ralph B. Kennard.

Park Service Bans Picture-Taking From Monument

After almost five months of war, during which anyone could ascend the Washington Monument, tallest structure in the Capital, and photograph such places as the White House, Capitol, Army and Navy Air stations and the National Airport, to say nothing of the Navy Yard and certain factories across the river in Alexandria, Va., the National Park Service ruled yesterday that no more pictures may be taken from the top of the Monument for the duration.

The park service, acting at the request of the military services, announced that in the future visitors would be required to check their cameras at the entrance of the Monument.

2 Men Sentenced for Evading Draft; 3d for Manslaughter

Jail sentences were imposed in District Court yesterday on two Negroes, charged with violation of the Selective Service Act, and a construction hoist operator, convicted of involuntary manslaughter.

Elmer C. Carroll, 42-year-old barber, of 702 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast, was given a sentence of six months to four years by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough. The defendant conducted his own case, declaring that he did not register for the draft, as charged, because he was a registered citizen of Mecca and forbidden by his religion to fight.

The defendant's seeming familiarity with Moslem teachings and the Bible led Judge Goldsborough to remark, "I'm convinced of your sincerity, but there is no reason why you should not have registered and then sought exemption on grounds of religious scruples."

Justice Goldsborough emphasized that Carroll would be released under provisions of the act "when you change your frame of mind and realize this is your country—any man or boy who won't root for his home team or country is no good."

Carroll said he would appeal.

A sentence of one to three years was imposed on John W. Miller, 29, taxicab driver, of 2109 G Street Northeast, by Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

In stating his reason for failing to fill out a Selective Service questionnaire, Miller said, "I can't pledge myself to any people. This is the battle of God Almighty Himself. He is going to destroy the wicked civilization and preserve the good. "Your Honor can determine for himself which is the wicked civilization."

Carl C. McCraney, 45 years old, construction hoist operator, was sentenced to serve 18 months to four years in jail by Judge Letts for involuntary manslaughter in the death of a Negro workman, Will Hines.

Hines, it was charged, was fatally injured when he plunged four stories to the ground after getting on a hoist which the defendant allegedly tied improperly. Prosecutor Bernard Margolius charged that McCraney was under the influence of liquor. The defendant and Hines were working on a Park Road Northwest construction job.

D. C. Renews Housing Fund Fight

Roosevelt to Lead Effort to Obtain Funds Authorized For Dwelling Units

The fight to restore District war housing funds to their full authorized strength, already launched under leadership of President Roosevelt and Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, is scheduled to reach a Senate subcommittee next Wednesday, it was learned yesterday.

Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, chairman of the deficiency appropriation subcommittee which will study the House-slashed grant, announced that hearings on the measure would start on that day.

Among the first proponents of restoring the $20,500,000, cut from the appropriation by a unanimous House vote, to go before the group will probably be Senator Ellender, who urged that the hearings be held.

Ellender, who aided in writing the legislation which authorized a grant of 50 million dollars declared on Thursday that the $29,500,000 allowed by the House fell far short of the amount needed to meet the emergency.

Also expected to testify Wednesday is John B. Blandford, National Housing Administrator, who discussed the lower chamber's drastic reduction in the appropriation with the President Thursday.

The President added his support to the restoration campaign at his press conference yesterday.

Eliminated by the House's action were 18 million dollars earmarked for the construction of 4000 permanent dwelling units for families. The legislators authorized instead funds to erect dormitories for single war workers only.

The House also alloted only $17,500,000 for community facilities and public works—a cut of $2,500,000 from the requested amount.

Police Boys' Club Aids War Training Plan

Revision of the athletic program of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club in order to accentuate contests and games which would give training of use in the Nation's war effort was approved last night by the board of directors of the club at the Ambassador Hotel.

The athletic and other programs of the organization are being brought into full compliance with the war effort, according to the report submitted for the program committee by L. Gordon Leech. Bodily combat games will be emphasized in the new program, it was reported.

The board also gave its approval to the operation within the clubs of the Junior Auxiliary Police Force, to serve as messengers for the Police Department in the event of serious disturbance to the regular communications system of the department. Maj. Edward Kelly, superintendent of police, and Max Farrington, executive secretary of the club, reported on the organization of the force and the training which is being given the boys in first aid and in the duties of messengers.

Sergt. Forrest L. Binswanger reported on plans for the operation of the summer camp of the club at Scotland, Md. He said that plans call for accommodating approximately 1000 boys for two-week periods. Transportation difficulties have been encountered because of tire rationing, he said. A special committee will be appointed by President H. Clifford Bangs to deal with the problem.

Policemen and Firemen Retire; 2 Promoted

Retirement of eight Metropolitan policemen, one member of the United States Park Police and two firemen became effective yesterday as two policemen received promotions, a policewoman resigned to serve with the park police and six privates transferred to the White House force.

Lieut. Emil Desch, 53, of the Fourth Precinct, was ordered retired because of ill health, as was Detective Sergt. George Thornton. Two others, inespacitated by wounds received while on duty, were found unfit for further duty. They are Detective Sergt. James G. Austin and Private Allan B. Baker, attached to the District attorney's office.

Baker was shot in the arm by a Negro with a 12-gauge shotgun in 1939 and recurring ill effects from the wound have made his right arm virtually useless. Austin never fully recovered from a severe beating administered by hoodlums last August.

Other policemen retiring are Privates E. A. Murray, A. H. Cochran, Randolph Lawson and William Millis, of the Metropolitan Police, and Private William J. Hammond of the park police. Beatrice Ball resigned and W. J. Mayo was retired.

The police promotions were issued to Sergt. Seth E. Bishop, who was made a lieutenant, and Private Meade C. Gairall, who was advanced to a sergeantcy.

The retiring firemen are Lieut. George E. Swords and Private Zane W. Kelly.

Miss Ball resigned to take an appointment with the United States Park Police, the first woman ever to be assigned to that agency. Her duties will be similar to those at local Women's Bureau.

Transferred to the White House force were Privates J. O. Davidson, Eighth Precinct; A. A. Zoncke, Tenth Precinct; Leslie Coffelt, Thirteenth Precinct; William D. Rutan, Seventh Precinct; Jack L. Lambert, First Precinct, and Reed P. Maughan, Twelfth Precinct.

Fire Causes $4000 Damage to Chevy Chase Club

Fire believed to have been caused by a short circuit yesterday caused damage of approximately $4000 to the fashionable Chevy Chase (Md.) Club.

The fire started in the top of a wooden pillar in the ballroom under the kitchen, according to Chief Edward J. Sackett of the Chevy Chase Fire Department. Firemen had to cut through several partitions to get to the flames.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Ralph Quinter about 4:30 a. m.

Liquor Permit Ban Is Urged

A resolution against issuing of any more liquor licenses in the Anacostia area was adopted last night at a meeting of the Anacostia Citizens Association in Anacostia High School.

Another resolution asking for development of the triangle at Sixteenth and S Streets and Minnesota Avenue Southeast as a park was also adopted.

John J. Watson announced his resignation as chairman of the executive committee of the Anacostia Defense Area. He stated that his other activities prevented him from giving the defense post the attention needed.

New Court's Organization Faces Delay

Failure to Name Judges Within Fixed Time Is Expected To Hold Up Task

Some overtime work is in prospect for somebody between now and next month as consequence of a little procrastination which has left the newly created Municipal Court of Appeals without the judges it was to get last Thursday.

Under legislation signed by the President April 1, the appellate court is to be fully organized in 60 days, or by the first of next month. It was also provided that three justices for the court would be named in 30 days.

Although the provision for the naming of the judges in 30 days is not mandatory, the procrastination means there is that much less time to get the appellate court organized, a matter that is causing some concern in Police and Municipal Court circles.

Merger Effective July 1

Consolidation of the present Police and Municipal Courts, however, is to become effective three months after the signing of the legislation, or July 1.

Appointment of the three appellate judges, which will be by the President, is not looked for before Monday, if then, for the reason that the names must go to the Senate, recessed for the weekend, for confirmation.

In speculation concerning the Appellate Court's membership, men most frequently mentioned are Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech and Assistant United States District Attorney Charles B. Murray.

At the Attorney General's office, comment indicated that names have already been submitted to the White House and further action must come from there.

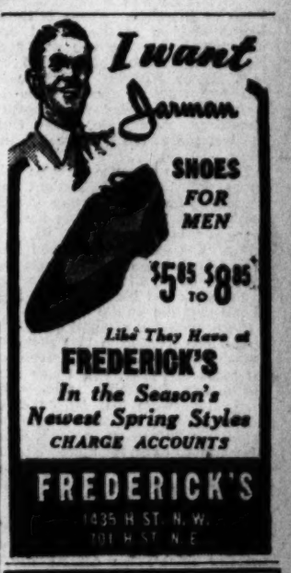

Autopsy Today Into Death of D. C. Garage Worker

An autopsy to determine the cause of a 22-year-old garage worker's death yesterday shortly after he was hauled from inside a gasoline tank he had been cleaning, has been ordered for today by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

The youth was William Thomas Myers, 531 Fifth Street Southeast, an employe of O'Boyle's Garage, 317 Michigan Avenue Northeast. According to police, Myers entered the tank wearing a gas mask, and was pulled out three minutes later gasping for breath.

The Fire Rescue Squad was summoned but attempts to revive Myers were futile. He was then taken to Casualty Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Coroner MacDonald decided to perform the autopsy to determine whether death was caused by gas fumes or a heart attack.

Announcement

As a contribution to the war effort the Washington Newspapers will, effective next Sunday, suspend the making of special deliveries to subscribers who fail to receive their papers from the regular carrier.

This curtailment in service will undoubtedly affect some subscribers occasionally. This step, however, is necessary in order to conserve rubber and vital transportation facilities.

The Washington Newspapers request subscribers to continue to advise their Circulation Departments regarding thefts, non-deliveries, or any other service difficulties, in order that remedial measures may be taken to assure regular delivery so far as possible.

As their contribution, carriers have pledged an "all-out" effort in order to maintain, as far as possible, their standards of prompt and regular service.

The Top Four, as Odds-Makers Rate Them, in the Kentucky Derby

Devil Diver Looms Favorite in Derby Today

17 Starters Are Listed For Classic

100,000 Fans Due To Witness Running Of Blue Grass Race At Churchill Downs

(Walter Haight's story on the Kentucky Derby today appears on Page 1, first section.)

By Jack Guenther

United Press Staff Writer

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—The race that carries a heart-beat for every hoof-beat—the strictly American phenomenon known as the Kentucky Derby—will be run again tomorrow over the same tan strip of loam on which it has been held every year since 1875 and tonight it looked as if this sixty-eighth running would be the biggest and richest of all.

There are 17 sleek, saucy horses waiting in their green and white barns behind the backstretch at old Churchill Downs. There is $87,250 in big bills and odd chance waiting at the pin-stripe finish line under the Golden Horseshoe. And there are 100,000 people waiting for the start of this test which is now the most famous race in the world.

Among the 17 proud thoroughbreds there are beauties and ugly ducklings. There are runners who were bred and born to the bluegrass and others who came up the hard way from across the tracks. There are rheumatics, gimphs and perfect physical marvels. But in this largest field in a half-dozen years there is still no "big horse" tabbed as the one to beat.

Devil Diver Favored

There is no War Admiral, Johnstown or Bimelich. There is Devil Dever and he is the closest approach to a favorite you will find. He is a handsome bay owned by Mrs. Payne Whitney and he will run tomorrow in the mile-and-a-quarter spin coupled with another Greentree stablemate, Shut Out, the last son of the late great Equipoise.

Tonight the advance odds on this entry were 3 to 1. Tonight the track was fast, but whether it will remain fast was something nobody knew or could write if he did know. Yet, whether fast, good, bad or indifferent—no matter what the footing—Devil Diver and his pal in the pink and black silks will go to the post the public choice.

Close behind them will come the mysterious Alsab, the 1941 juvenile champ, who has lost all seven of his races this year, and Texas Ben Whitaker's pint-size Requested. These two were 3-1, 4-1 or even 5-1, depending on the person to whom you talked or listened. Natives and experts alike expect either one of them or one of the Greentree horses to win.

Apache Rated at 10-1

Not that the many others weren't without backers in this wild and whacky mint julep capital which has suddenly been flooded with carloads, train loads and plane loads of "furriners." Texas money was riding on Valdina Farm's Valdina Orphan and Hollywood at 5-1; Eastern dollars rode with Belair Stud's Apache at 10-1, and hunch bettors strung along with Regards at 12-1.

Among the entries these eight horses were considered solid. The long-shot hopefuls liked T. D. Buhl's Sweep Swinger and Calumet Farm's

Indians Register 12th Straight, Slugging Nats for 13-6 Victory in Series Opener

Tribe Shells Four Washington Hurlers for 16 Hits; Ortiz and Fleming Slam Home Runs

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

That little three-game winning streak of the Nats met a violent end yesterday. It was clubbed out of being by the league-leading Cleveland Indians whose own winning streak surged to 12 straight. It was a 13-6 victory for Cleveland, and a messy affair for and by the Nats in the series opener.

It took the Nats 20 minutes to get three Indians out in the first inning and by that time Cleveland hand a 4-0 lead. In fact, Washington's rookie pitcher, Bill Kennedy, making his first big league start, was the first out of the inning. He faced four batters and got nobody out.

The 8000 ladies day customers had one brief moment of delight. That was when big Roberto Ortiz reinstated the Nats in the ball game with a second-inning home run that temporarily tied the score at 4-4. Thereafter the Indians took complete charge.

Against Kennedy and three of his hapless successors, Walter Masterson, Alex Carrasquel and Hardin Cathey, the Indians turned on the greatest display of power seen in the stadium since last year's night games. They sloughed the Washington pitching for 16 hits and they weren't trifling much with singles. They swatted four doubles, four three-baggers and a home run, the last a contribution by Rookie First Baseman Les Fleming.

Indians Win in Fourth

The Indians won the ball game in the fourth inning which they entered with a skimpy one-run lead and came out of with a 10-4 margin.

Tigers Shell Yank Hurlers To Win, 7-2

Trout Holds Champs To 4 Hits; Breuer Knocked Out in Fifth Liner Hurts Patrick

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—Detroit's Tigers bombarded three pitchers for 16 hits and lambasted the New York Yankees, 7-2, today to snatch second place in the American League standing from the world champions.

Paul (Dizzy) Trout held the Yanks to four hits in gaining his third mound triumph of the year against one loss, but he had to have help from Hal Newhouser in the ninth inning when the losers scored their second run on two walks and a hit.

Marv Breuer started for the Yankees and was nicked for ten hits and five runs before giving way to Hank Borowy in the fifth. The defeat was Breuer's second, compared with two wins. Borowy and Johnny Lindell, who took over in the ninth, each yielded one run.

Tommy Henrich scored the Yankee's first run in the fourth frame on his second homer of the season.

Buddy Hassett and Henrich led off the last half of the ninth with passes and Joe DiMaggio singled in a run before Trout was lifted. Newhouser then retired Charley Keller, Bill Dickey and Frank Crosetti to slam the door in the champs' faces.

Bob Patrick, utility outfielder of the Tigers, suffered a fractured knee cap in pregame practice when he was struck by a drive from Jib Bloodworth's bat and was taken to a hospital.

Pirates Beat Dodgers, 7-6; Gain Ground

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 1.—The Pittsburgh Pirates scored two runs in the ninth inning on a wild pitch and an error today to trip the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7-6, and cut a full game off the lead of the National League champions.

The defeat, ending a six-game winning streak for the Dodgers, reduced their margin to three games over the second-place Pirates.

Arky Vaughan, a former Pirate, committed the costly bobble with the bases loaded after he had sent the Dodgers ahead in the first half of the ninth with a double.

Johnny Allen, fourth Brooklyn hurler, took over in the ninth with a one-run lead and paved the way for his own defeat, his first of the year against two wins.

After Pinchhitter Eddie Stewart had greeted him with a single, Allen walked Pinchhitter Cully Rikard and Stu Martin to load the bases. He fanned Jonney Barrett but uncorked a wild pitch that let Stewart score the tying run.

He passed Bob Elliott purposely, filling the bases again, but Vaughan let Vince DiMaggio's grounder go

Alsab Mystery Horse Of Field; Requested Has New York Backing

A Staff Correspondent

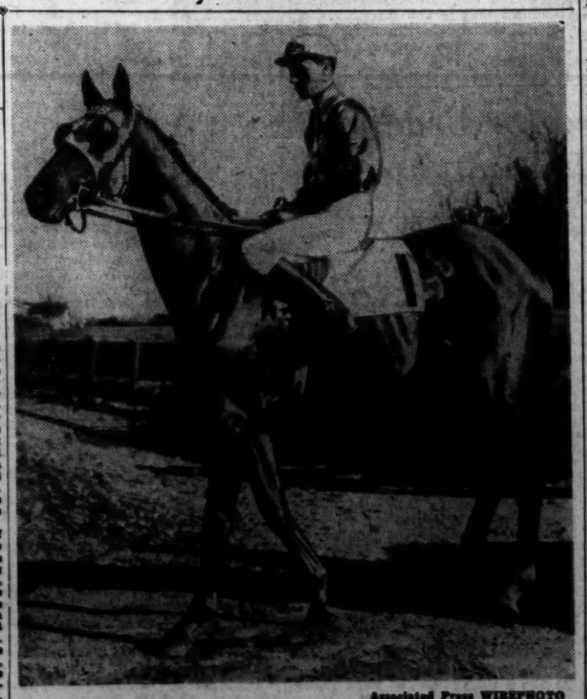

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—Here's the brief histories of the 17 horses named for the sixty-eighth running of the Kentucky Derby:

ALSAB—The mystery horse of the race. He has the experts guessing as they never guessed before. At the close of his 2-year-old campaign he was hailed as another Man o' War. Purchased for $700 at the Saratoga sales, he ran up $110,600 last year. Won 15 of 22 starts as a juvenile while knocking track records for a loop. Around Maryland he took the Eastern Shore, Walden and Spalding. Lowe Jenkins. Came 1942 and the Alsab balloon began to deflate. He has failed to win in seven starts, making good showings, but beaten nevertheless.

REQUESTED—A small horse and one who will have the backing of Texas tomorrow. Many of the scribes already have "deep in the heart of Texas" leads ready in case he wins. He cost Ben Whitaker of the Lone Star State $1200 at the yearling sales and will have plenty of New York support for it was at the tracks in that State that he showed his best form, most recently in winning the Wood Memorial. Won 9 of 16 starts as a juvenile. Accounted for seven stakes and took a licking from Alsab in a match race. Won the Flamingo this year and was third in Maryland's Chesapeake. He is by Questionnaire.

SWEEP SWINGER—Another son of Questionnaire and one discarded by the Greentree Stable. May turn out to be another Seabiscuit. Did a lot of traveling and plenty of running as a 2-year-old, starting 23 times and winning only three races. One of these was the Endurance Handicap at Bowie. Never has beaten much but packs a stretch wallop that might be handy at a mile and a quarter.

DEVIL DIVER—He will be seeking the third Derby for the Sire, St. Germans, who sent Twenty Grand and Bold Venture postward. Those who like to play according to the step watch, like the colt.

WASHINGTON, MAY 2, 1942

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Lou Boudreau, who is baseball's Man of the Month, is wearing his new honors nicely. The young man who has done something of a miracle job in lifting his Cleveland Indians to the top of the American League with a 12-game winning streak, refuses to give himself up to the supreme delight of his lofty estate.

POVICH

"We've been going pretty fair," said Boudreau yesterday in a masterpiece of understatement, "and we've got a fine chance to finish in the first division." Pennant? No, Boudreau isn't thinking about winning the pennant at this time. "If we are still hanging in that first division around August, maybe I'll give the pennant a serious thought," he said.

Rookie Manager Boudreau made some haste to point out that "Cleveland teams always get away well in the spring, so perhaps we shouldn't be too enthusiastic." If, and when, the let-down comes, it won't be too great a shock for the young man who is preparing himself against that day. He doesn't want to be caught living in any fool's paradise.

Not the least factor in the Indians' surprising surge has been the ball playing of young Boudreau himself, aside from whatever managerial genius he has contributed. At this writing, young Boudreau has been giving his ball club the best shortstop protection in the league, and if he is weighted down with managerial responsibilities it isn't evident in his hitting. He has driven more runs across the plate than any other member of the Cleveland cast.

Pitchers Lighten Boudreau's Load

He was talking about the effect of his managerial duties on his own play and said he was lucky. "I'm lucky to have fellows like Burt Shotton and Oscar Melillo and George Susce around as coaches. They're helping me to manage the club, and I need help. I never realized what a snap I had before I was a manager. All I had to do was play shortstop. Now I have to worry about everybody's fielding and hitting, and the pitching. I've got a head full of team play."

The work of his pitching staff has lightened his load, Boudreau relates. "You don't have any pitching worries when your pitchers are winning and going the route, as ours are. It's a pleasure to manage a winning ball club. Everybody is happy and you can't make many mistakes."

It was no breeze for Bludreau, though, in the first week of the season. The Indians had won their opening game, and then dropped three straight. Those were dark days for the rookie manager, and he was definitely on his mettle. But he brought his club out of that slump nicely. In fact, as we went to press, he had done the perfect job of bringing the Indians out of their early-April spin. Twelve straight victories on the heels of those three straight defeats.

There isn't much doubt that Boudreau has infused the club with his own dash and hustle. Even in the drab days of 1941 and before when the Indians were a pathetic club in a slump, young Boudreau at shortstop was giving constantly, a fine ball player on a losing team. By common consent of his teammates, not by office appointment, Boudreau was field captain of the Indians despite his youth. His knack for leadership had been noted long before, when as a sophomore at the University of Illinois he virtually bossed the Big Ten championship basketball team.

Club Spirit Undergoes Change

The spirit on the Cleveland Club has undergone a complete transformation as one of Boudreau's ball players volunteers the information. "Hell, we're playing to win every day," he said. "It used to be that a Cleveland ball player would say, 'I got my 2 hits today, who won the game?' Now he says, 'We won, I think we made 10 hits today.'"

The miracle that Boudreau has worked on the Indians seemingly knows no bounds. Somehow, he has made a winning pitcher of Vernon Kennedy, whom the White Sox, Tigers, Browns and Nats gave up on successively. Kennedy got a vote of confidence from Boudreau in spring training and has since gone to the mound in two starts, winning a 2-0 game from the Browns and a 6-1 game from the Athletics.

Strangely, the Indians haven't as yet missed Bob Feller, whose absence was supposed to wreck 'em. Mel Harder, who has been useless to the club until June of the last four years, has won two of his three starts very impressively. His one defeat was a 1-0 affair. Boudreau won't commit himself on his ideas of the Indians' ultimate position. "I do think, though," he says, "that if we finish ahead of the Yankees, Red Sox and Tigers, we'll be pretty close to winning the pennant."

Golf's 'Bit' for U. S. War Effort

New York, May 1.—In its quiet way, the game of golf is doing the country's best job of raising sports funds for the Red Cross, USO and Army and Navy relief—though it has more reason than any other game to yelp that it has been discriminated against by the Administration.

CONSIDINE

No more golf balls. No more clubs will be made, or be permitted to be sold, after the end of this month. No more tires on which to ride to courses. Rationed gas for the mechanical equipment needed to keep the courses in shape. No more leather for golf bags. Less money for spending on golf memberships, greens fees, etc.

Amid all the hullabaloo over how much racing is going to raise, and what baseball and other sports will do, pro and amateur golfers, great stars and frightening dubs, have gone about the business of building up the golfing wartime kitty. Before the year is over it would not be surprising to see golf raise one million dollars for war charities.

The three great Hale America golfing days—on Memorial Day, Independence Day and Labor Day—will see tournaments of all kinds on every course in the country. All entry fees and gate receipts will go to the Red Cross. They will be unprecedented sports days, with perhaps a million men and women playing on each of the days, and paying for the right to play.

We believed (and wrote) that it was nonsense to call off the National Open this year. We still think so, but the tournament that takes its place—also called the Hale America—will raise plenty for Navy Relief. It will be held in Chicago June 18-21. The U. S. Golf Association has said that it will not be considered the National Championship because winning it will be a "hollow victory," what with many prominent golfers in the armed services and unable to compete.

Well, it now appears that the tournament field will be as hot as any the open has seen in years. Even Bobby Jones, who hasn't appeared in medal play competition (except his masters tournament) since his grand slam of 1930, will be in the running. So will 1941 Open Champion Craig Wood and all the other top-flight players. The open tradition of awarding $6000 in purses and medals will be followed.

There will be no major tournament in the vast New York area this year, what with the cancellation of the Goodall Round Robin following on the heels of the evaporation of the Metropolitan Open. But if Stanton Griffis, of Navy Relief, and the P. G. A. have their ways, New York will be among the cities to be touched by golfers Bing Crosby and Bob Hope in their charity exhibition schedule. Plans now call for at least one match here, with Craig Wood and Ben Hogan rounding out the foursome.

Lacrosse With Princeton Features Field Day at Maryland

Track, Tennis Baseball Also On Schedule

Baseball Team Faces Washington; Netmen Meet N. C.; Thin Clads Face Powerful Duke

University of Maryland today presents one of its classiest looking field day athletic programs in years, featuring a lacrosse match with Princeton that is supposed to decide the national intercollegiate title.

The program:

2:30—Baseball, with Washington College.

3:00—Tennis, North Carolina.

4:00—Lacrosse, Princeton.

One ticket entitles the fan to take in all the events.

Both Maryland and Princeton will come up to their big stick battle undefeated against collegiate opposition. Each has lost one match to Mount Washington and by the identical score of 5-3. Hence it is small wonder that today's match is rated a toss-up, with Maryland given an edge.

Only in lacrosse and baseball is Maryland given any chance, for North Carolina's tennis team, unbeaten in 63 straight matches, and Duke's powerful trackmen are considered out of the Terps' class.

One of the headline events of the Duke-Maryland meet should be the shot put event in which Steve Lach, Duke's Southern Conference champion, will match his strength against Heck Horn, the Terps' sensational sophomore who is unbeaten in shot and discus in dual meets this season and who placed third in the discus in the Penn Relays. A third formidable contender in the shot put will be Lach's running-mate, Bob Gantt, sophomore football and basketball star. Horn should win today's discus throw.

Condon Favored

Maryland probably will win only one running event, the half-mile, in which its Bob Condon will be the favorite.

Duke's outstanding track stars include Moffett Storer, sprinter; Warren Brown, Southern Conference 440 champion; Hank Profenius, Conference mile titleholder, and Wendell Lockwood, generally the runner-up to Profenius against S. C. competition.

Forty-two schools will be represented in the interscholastic track meet in which there will be 13 open events and seven that are restricted to State schools. Entered from the Washington area are all the local public high schools, George Washington of Alexandria and Washington-Lee of Ballston, the latter one of the favorites to cop the open team title.

In baseball, Maryland's in-and-out Terrapins will be seeking to repay Washington College for the 11-12 decision they dropped to the Sho'men during last year's Field Day program. For this vengeance job Coach Burt Shipley has saved his pitching ace, burly Max Hunt.

One Ambitious Westerner Is Clearly Out

Catcher Sid Drazin of Roosevelt was waiting patiently for Bryan Bell, jr., when the latter attempted to reach home without a slide on a Roosevelt error in the seventh inning of yesterday's game at Western. The Raider first baseman was out on Frank Redinger's peg from right field. Western took a 14-2 decision

Western High's perfectly rounded ball club did everything that could be asked of a defending champion yesterday, with the result that Roosevelt was its third straight interhigh victim, 14 to 2, on the Raider diamond. At Eastern the home forces bowed by a 10 to 4 count to Tech in a second series game.

The Red Raiders' pitchers, Charley Hines and Clarence Kuldell, sparked their team's triumph with a 4-hit performance. Hitters helped out with a total of 10 hits, seven for extra bases. Finally, the club's fielding was charged with a mere two errors as only 33 Roosevelt batters came up in the full nine innings.

After going down 1-2-3 in the first inning, Western sluggers caught on to Rider pitching and from then on were slightly terrific. They made four hits good for four runs in the second frame, added another tally in the third, three in the fourth and wound up with a 6-run barrage in the seventh.

Heading the winners' attack were Bob Cockrill and Pitcher Hines. The first slammed a double and triple in four times up while Hines augmented his five-inning, 2-hit pitching with a like effort. By way of extras Jim Malarkey thumped a double, Jim Karas added a triple, and Ray Love featured the big seventh with a four-bagger deep in leftfield.

Meanwhile Roosevelt, whose veterans Billy Garner and Charley Howard won't become eligible until today, had only one player to boast about. That was squat Carl Sturgess, bespectacled outfielder. He beat out all Raider hitters with a double, triple and home run in four trips to the plate, driving in both Rider runs.

Leigh Joy, Walt Lansdale and Jack Wilson had a chance to stop the hosts' slugging. Of the three Lansdale was the most mistreated, and by his own mates. They committed five of their six errors while he worked six innings, and Catcher Sid Drazin kicked in with five passed balls.

It took a brilliant rally for Tech to win at all after Eastern had amassed a 4-0 lead going into the seventh stanza. Then they scored three runs, came back with six more in the eighth and added an insulting single tally in the ninth.

Gold Cup Field Today Headed By Blockade

America's greatest timber horse, Charles E. Tuttle's Blockade, heads the list of 14 entries for the Virginia Gold Cup Steeplechase at Broadview, near Warrenton, Va., today at 4 p. m.

Blockade, three times winner of the Maryland Hunt Cup, almost came back for a fourth victory in the Maryland classic last week when his rider misjudged a flag and eliminated him from the running. Hence 'chase enthusiasts are anxious to see the chestnut Man o' War gelding in action Saturday against many of the same horses that ran in the Old Line race.

Other starters include the 1941 winner at Broadview, Christopher Greer, jr.'s Goldun, which will be coupled with another Greer entry, Houseman; Mrs. E. Douglas Prime's Kitty Kidd, Mrs. Amory Carhart's Sir Romeo, George T. Walker's good mare, Metope, from Chevy Chase, Md.; Mrs. Frank M. Goul's Hold Forth, Frank O'Keefe's Sun Alv, Frederick Warburg's Mountsville, Mrs. J. M. Franklin's Charge Account, William F. Cochran, jr.'s Clifton's Max and H. L. Strauss' Last Appeal.

House and Hold Forth, who went down in a two-horse spill at the nineteenth fence in the Maryland, had run excellently until that time and will be highly regarded at Broadview.

The Landowners' race, which will precede the Gold Cup at 3:30, is a 1-mile flat event, open to farmers or their sons who live in the Warrenton Hunt country.

Central High Golfers Bow In Upset, 8-1

Coolidge High's golfers turned in one of the major upsets of D. C. Schoolboy Golf League play yesterday when they downed Central, 8-1, at Columbia Country Club. The winners had lost six starts while Central was winning half of its six matches.

Its seventh straight triumph went to Roosevelt as it remained in the interhigh section lead, Anacostia being shut out at Kenwood. Bill Brownrigg led in the victory with a sub-par 71 and Art Myers and Joe Barse followed with clever 75s.

Other matches went to St. John's, its first, over Devitt by a 7-2 count at Congressional. Wilson continued to threaten Roosevelt's lead with a 7-2 margin over Western at Army-Navy.

Loyola Nine Rallies, Beats Cards, 11 to 4

Loyola of Baltimore smashed over four runs in the fifth to unsnarl a 3-3 tie and then went on yesterday to hand Catholic University an 11-4 licking at Brookland.

A four-hit pitching job by Tazourek, plus a 13-hit attack, were the chief ingredients of Loyola's victory. It was Loyola's fifth Mason-Dixon Conference victory in seven starts, and C. U.'s second conference loss in three games.

The visitors combined a hit batsman, two walks and Tazourek's single for three runs in the second inning, but C. U. tied the score in the following inning with a three-run outburst, featured by Johnny Mercak's double with the bases loaded.

Loyola's clinching rally in the fifth spawned from singles by Witkowski, Dunn and Schoberlin and a triple by Schwaldenberg.

William and Mary Noses Out G. W., 4 to 3

Two Luck-Anointed Triples in Ninth Help Indians Score; Merritt Wins in Relief

By Jack Munhall

In a reckless attempt for its secondary victory in as many days, George Washington yesterday threw its entire pitching staff (all three of them) into the game against William and Mary on the East Ellipse only to lose out in the ninth, 4-3, on two successive fluky triples.

Versatile Billy Robertson, who swapped his catcher's mitt for a pitcher's glove in supplanting starting hurler Bobby Gilham with two out in the fourth, was charged with the loss, but for him, particularly, it was a tough beating to swallow. Pudgy Billy allowed only four hits up to the ninth in holding the Indians while G. W. scored three times to knot the count at 3-3. One run was scored against Robertson, but it was charged to Gilham. And even in the ninth when he yielded two three baggers in a row, Billy wasn't entirely to blame.

Lead-off batter Jim Leftwich opened the inning for the visitors by looping a hit over first base which, until it hopped weirdly over Rightfielder Joe Hall's head, was no more than a single. Leftwich scooted around to third while Hall chased the crazily bouncing ball. The second triple was a better hit, but luck annointed also. Howard Smith caught Robertson's pitch squarely on the bat and sent a towering liner to right that Hall at first charged in on and then vainly tried to overhaul.

After his misjudgment of the fly, Hall did well to hold Smith to a triple while Leftwich scored the decisive run. Little blame should attach to Hall on Smith's hit, however, since even a long fly would have tallied Leftwich.

In came "Red" Kloak at this point to pitch to John Korczowski. The first batter reached first when John Konizewski dropped Roy McNeil's peg off his easy grounder. Then Kloak blew 'em down, forcing Lester Hooker to fly to Len Sokol, the game's fielding star in center, and whiffing Harvey Johnson and Jim Howard. Kloak was to have been saved, fresh, for today's game with Georgetown on the East Ellipse, 2:30.

Reds, Facing Cellar, Edge Mighty Phils

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 1.—Battling to keep out of the cellar, Cincinnati's Reds turned back a ninth-inning threat today to defeat Philadelphia, 6 to 5, for their first victory in five starts.

Just 805 cash customers watched apathetically as the one-time world champions first staked the Phils to two runs in a weird third inning, then knocked Starter Johnny Podgajny from the box with three runs in the fifth after twice breaking ice in the fourth.

That third inning: Lloyd Waner grounded. Danny Litwhiler's grounder hit Shortstop Eddie Joost in the chest for the first of his two errors; Nick Etten flied and Ronald Northey's grounder went for a double after beaning First Sacker Frank McCormick. To top things off, Elmer Riddle uncorked a wild pitch on which both Litwhiler and Northey scored. Bobby Bragan lined to Joost to end the nightmare.

In the ninth, with one away, Waner and Litwhiler singled, Etten flied and Northey singled to score his center fielder, but Riddle got Bragan to ground again for the final out.

Rigney Hurls, Chisox Break Streak, 5 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 1.—The Chicago White Sox broke a seven-game losing streak today behind the six-hit pitching of Johnny Rigney, defeating the Athletics, 5-2.

The loss was doubly disastrous to the A's, who lost the services of Second Baseman Billy Knickerbocker in the seventh. He broke a thumb in deflecting rookie Bob Kennedy's single.

The Sox put the game away in the fourth, erasing a one-run A's lead. With two out, Joe Kuhel singled and stole second. Max West walked and then Kennedy singled, scoring both Kuhel and West. Kennedy came home on Tommy Turner's double. In the ninth Turner walked, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Wally Moses single.

Browns Pound Bosox Hurlers Win, 10 to 6

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 1.—The St. Louis Browns mauled three of four Boston Red Sox pitchers today for a 10-6 victory in the first contest of their two-game series.

Joe Dobson started for the Sox and was routed when the Browns erupted with a five-run fifth inning. Don Gutteridge opened with a single and scored on Harlond Clift's double. Frank McQuinn's single scored Clift and Dobson was derricked in favor of Tex Hughson. Walt Judnich and Chet Laabs singled in succession and Vernon Stephens sent them all home with a long double.

Joe Judge Wails as Freshmen Are Barred From G. W. Game

Hoya Coach Has but Eight Varsity Men to Start Today; Bill Bornheimer Recruited

Joe Judge, the Georgetown baseball coach, is mad at George Washington. Coach Judge cannot understand why George Washington will not permit him to use freshmen in their game at 2:30 today on the East Ellipse when, without freshmen, the Hoyas have only eight real players.

"Oh, we'll put nine men on the field," Judge hastens to explain, "but the ninth man will be Bill Bornheimer, a basketball player, who hasn't played any baseball at all since 1940."

Georgetown's nine-man frosh-less team beat George Washington, 8-4, two weeks ago. Since, the slim Hoya squad has been taxed further by the loss of Pitcher Danny Murphy whose parents were killed in last weekend's bus crash on the Washington-Baltimore Boulevard.

Judge says he realized that the Southern Conference to which George Washington belongs does not play freshmen.

"But," he says, "I notice that both Maryland and G. W. allow teams like A. U. to use freshmen against them, so why not us, too? Especially when we're on the spot, like today."

Judge wound up his "unofficial" complaint with a prayer that nothing happens to any of his players today, especially starting pitcher Joe Wells. Dick Dieckelman, only other available hurler, will be in the outfield.

Horsey Set Set Down . . .

D. C. Horsemen Stay at Home For 2-Show Summer Season

Bridle Trails Body Starts Action Sunday With Event for Members

By Anne Hagner

With one show in Sunday and another announced for the not too distant future, the local horsey set has found plenty of reason to be content with a summer season at home instead of in far-away show circuits, as in other years.

The Washington Bridle Trails Association show Sunday at the Rock Creek Park equitation field is limited to members only—but its membership is so complete that almost every horse owner in the District, nearby Maryland and Virginia is eligible to compete.

Classes are for both privately owned and riding academy hacks and hunters, and in addition there will be an outing for pairs of jumpers, in which combined ownership is permitted and may be from either division. As is customary in such shows, there will be no entry fees or admission charges.

The spring show will mark the first leg on the journey toward championshi, points for the series of two shows sponsored by the association. The final one is set for mid-September.

Of tremendous interest to local followers is the announcement that the Columbus Horse Show will be held at Meadowbrook on June 27 and 28—and thereby hangs a tale.

In other years, the Columbus show was given for the benefit of the Forest Glen Council of the Knights of Columbus. Now, with war benefits the order of the day, the hard-working Forest Glen committee will devote its usual efforts toward putting on a show in the combined interests of the Navy Relief and Army Emergency Relief Agencies.

Another change in the old regime is that the governing body of the show will include not only Knights of Columbus members, but also horse show enthusiasts who hitherto only joined in the fun.

More than 20 gathered in the Forest Glen Council's Hall Wednesday night to discuss plans for programs, prize lists and judges. With the emphasis on more strictly local entries than ever before, the committee plans to concentrate on classes that will be most suitable to such competition.

Bath Captures Steeplechase in Record Time at Pimlico

Rider Cruz Is Injured In Late Spill

Suffers a Broken Collarbone; Victor Pays $7.30; Wins By Eight Lengths

By Clocker Mike
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, May 1.—The Jervis Spencer Steeplechase Handicap held the spotlight on the fish day card at this point and it was Mrs. Ogden Phipps' Bath which held the spotlight in the actual running. This 4-year-old leaper took the lead after the first mile and just breezed to a new course record of 3.49 3-5, thus clipping two-fifths off the old mark held by Mrs. Arthur White's Bay Dean. Cottesmore took the place from Redlands.

Bath, which Mrs. Phipps purchased out of the Thomas Hitchcock dispersal sale, left no doubt as to his superiority as he just coasted in behind the pace for a mile and when his rider, Frankie Slate, former rider of Chase Me, asked the leaper for speed, he responded and took command while fencing perfectly. Approaching the final fence the winning combination had opened up a 20-length lead but after taking the final obstacle Slate began pulling his charge up to reach the wire with eight lengths to spare. The race, which Bay Dean won last year in record time, carried a net value of $2550 and marked the first start of the year for Bath. The winner's straight mutuel was $7.30.

Jockey Howard Cruz, who was aboard Good Chance, suffered a broken collarbone when his mount fell and rolled on him at the final fence. This was the only casualty of the race.

Cheap routers held the spotlight in the opener and it was G. A. Saporta's Bardy that took down the main honors in the 11-horse field, traveling a mile and 70 yards. Apprentice R. D. Scott shot the son of Sun Circle to the front at the start and was never headed as he toured the distance in 1:46. Molasses Nibs was nearest the winner at the finish, with Scarcanter, half of the Straus-Martin entry, in the third slot. The winner was slightly neglected in the wagering and returned $17.60.

Mrs. Gustave Ring's Hasteville, a 2-year-old son of Haste, which set a new track record in his debut, made it two in a row when he easily sprinted to a four-length score in the second race, involving 11 juveniles over the abbreviated 4½-furlong distance. The little black colt, despite using up 53 1-5 seconds compared to 52 3-5 in his first start, could have gone much better today had Porter Roberts let him run at any stage.

Life Stories On 17 Horses In Derby Field

He has worked like the wind and has never been out of the money. Won 4 of 12 starts as a 2-year-old. He was second in Maryland's Pimlico Futurity and won the Hopeful at Saratoga. Some Chance beat him by a nose in a photo for the Belmont Futurity. Wintered in Florida but did not start there.

SHUT OUT—Entry mate of Devil Diver, by Equipoise and out of the mare, Goose Egg, from whom he gets his name. Received more publicity early last year than Devil Diver. Won 3 of 9 juvenile outings. Tailing off as the season progressed. Was slightly injured in the Hopeful but is shipshape and ready now. Finished second at Keeneland and then came back to beat Bless Me in the Blue Grass Stakes. Jockey Eddie Arcaro, who had his choice of the two Greentree mounts, took Devil Diver.

FIRST FIDDLE—The C. V. Whitney barn didn't fancy the future of this son of Royal Minstrel and put him in $2500 claiming company last summer. Mrs. Edward Mulrenan liked the price and took the gray horse. He won 3 of 18 juvenile starts and earned his Derby chance by being fourth in the Wood Memorial. Already had eight starts this year, including a second to Apache.

HOLLYWOOD—The Valdina Farm hopes to make this colt a second Omar Khayyam as far as the Derby is concerned. He is an imported youngster and a victory would point him out as the second overseas winner of the classic. He is trained by former Jockey Frankie Catrone, who has obtained his friend, George Woolf, to do the riding. His only start as a 2-year-old was a winning one in an obscure race. He has been out three times this year, winning at Fair Grounds and Keeneland before finishing fourth behind his stablemate, Valdina Orphan, in the Derby Trial.

FAIRY MANAH—The experts smile when this one is mentioned. He has little to recommend him in a competitive way. Maryland followers may remember him for his victory in a maiden field at Havre de Grace when he won going away in a sprint. He may be in the race to advertise "better things for better living, through chemistry," for he is owned by William du Pont. He is by Man o' War and the Derby will be the fourth start of his career.

FIRST PRIZE—This son of Bulldog has shown much bite. He was a tired third in a six and a half-furlong sprint here yesterday. The scribes promptly scratched him, but the colt bounced into the entries this morning. In four starts, his only victory was in a sprint at Keeneland.

WITH REGARDS—Lightly regarded until he ran a sensational race in winning the Arkansas Derby in track-record-breaking time. T. D. (Pinkie) Grimes, who raises cattle in Colorado and looks the part, picked this one up for $800 and hopes to parlay him into a 3-year-old champion. Turned back sprinters here and the boys say, "He'll be on top as far as he goes."

SUN AGAIN—If the Derby was two weeks away, Trainer Ben Jones, who saddled Whirlaway last year, would be enthusiastic about this Sun Teddy colt. As a juvenile he won four of seven outings, including the Arlington Futurity. The youngster developed leg trouble and had to be "fired" twice during the winter. His most important accomplishment this year was his smashing second to Valdina Orphan in the Derby Trial. He hung at the end in this race.

APACHE—This is the colt that New York raved about and then gave the cold shoulder when he was beaten off in the Wood Memorial. He played second fiddle to Requested around the Gotham ovals last year. He came out in 1942 to win the Experimental Handicap and the High Quest Purse, while preparing for the Wood. Despite all, his stable has confidence in his ability. His pop, Alcazar, is now the property of the U. S. Army Remount Service.

FAIR CALL—Maryland fans remember this one as the sizzling pacemaker before he tired and was third to Alsab in the Walden at Pimlico last fall. He wintered in Maryland. Started 12 times as a juvenile and won 2. His best race was in the Ardsley Handicap at Empire when he set a track record for a mile and 70 yards in 1:41 2-5. Plenty speed in this son of Trace Call but his staying ability is doubted

DOGPATCH—After the Milkyway Farm won with Gallahadion in the 1940 Derby, the scribes have respect for anything the stable sends postward. This one won two of 11 tries last year and has shown little or nothing this season. However, Gallahadion didn't look much better when he came on the track. Dogpatch is a brother of Bull Lea.

BOOT AND SPUR—This son of Blue Larkspur has little to encourage his handlers except an interesting name. He has won races, 5 in 20 starts to date, but has beaten no horses of importance. E. C. A. Berger, his owner, apparently is willing to put up the $500 starting fee and then do a lot of hoping.

SIR WAR—Comes from the usually reliable Circle M. Ranch barn. He got Derby blood in his veins for his sire, Sir Gallahad III, has two Derby winners to his credit. Did little to distinguish himself last year and has won an allowance race this season at Keeneland. All the dope says this one is running "over his head."

VALDINA ORPHAN—This colt is by Hilltown (I never heard of him) and has the Derby Trial victory this week to point to as a recommendation tomorrow. He turned back Alsab, Sun Again and other eligibles in that outing. Can he do it again? Started 13 times in 1941 and won three. Plenty of foot, but may stop, the clockers say.

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Well, folks, it took a long while, but Danny Scocca finally reached the winner's circle yesterday. Yes, sir, the Washington lad had the leg up on Mrs. R. Feinberg's Firebroom. Danny has been close repeatedly, but just couldn't seem to break the jinx. Even though we didn't have a ticket on the 3-year-old, we were rooting for him to get down in front. If you think Scocca had a tough time getting to the winner's circle, look at Bob Merritt. He still hasn't made it. It's a tough break for Bennings that he wasn't here to see his boy score. Cape Cod, one which won the Rowe Memorial and the Southern Maryland Handicap at the recent Bowie meeting, moved back into the limelight yesterday when he breezed an easy 3 furlongs in 0:37. This is the first move made by the handicap runner since finishing third to Challedon and Mioland in the Philadelphia Handicap. Cape Cod is being pointed for the 6-furlong Jennings Handicap, in which field he will probably be the high weight starter. In this field, he is expected to meet such high-class sprinters as Transfigure, Battle Jack, Ocean Blue and Joe Ray, winner of Tuesday's renewal of the Rennert Handicap. It is also possible that Harris Brown will ship Mrs. T. Christopher's Double-rab here for the Jennings. This sprinter seems to be the best around New England this year. Ocean Blue, you will remember, is the speedy son of Blue Larkspur, which broke his maiden over this track last year. Among the Dixie eligibles seen on the track yesterday morning were H. C. Hatch's Filisteo, winner of last year's Exterminator Handicap, and Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Impound, which showed a corking effort while making his first start for a year in the Baltimore Spring Handicap. This pair have been entered in the Culpepper Handicap, secondary on the Saturday card featured by the Pimlico Oaks.

I don't know who Bennings will take in the Derby, but I believe I'll take Sun Again to pick up where his stablemate, Whirlaway, left off. See you in the paddock.

CLOCKER MIKE.

First race—LIBERTY PATSY has shown speed in many of those maiden races and appears to have found a field suitable for graduation. LORD CALVERT has been training well and must be given a chance. CAIRNGORM showed a good effort at the 'Graw and must not be overlooked.

Second race—UNCLE BILLIE may be a long price in here and take the whole pot. Has worked well enough to win it. SUNSTORM was scratched yesterday with this in view and should be runner-up. MENELAUS seems to improve each start.

Third race—KING COB is in very good hands and has always jumped well over this course. WAR PORT showed a good race earlier in the meeting and may have needed that effort. RED BAIN has a little class on this kind.

Fourth race—ABRASION looks like the proverbial lock in a field like this. When this one gets good, he's a hard sprinter to down. EQUIPET is only a 3-year-old filly, but rates a chance with these. WARLOCK is due for improvement.

Fifth race—IMPOUND raced well enough at 6 furlongs on opening day to rate top call over these high-class ones. FILISTEO has worked in excellent form and won several over this track last year. HE ROLLS was never better than at present.

Sixth race—I'm going out on a limb here and try to make RED ROSETTE beat this field of fillies. She broke her maiden over the 'Graw track and the time was excellent. VAGRANCY raced well in New York before shipping here and is the contender. CHIQUITA MIA is another brisk worker.

Seventh race—This race has drawn a bunch of cheap horses and I'm going to string along with AVESTA. BOSTON PAL has gone way back, but must be given a chance. SUNPHANTOM is a hard one to guess, but is tough when in a running mood.

Eighth race—YAWL ran well enough last out to take this field into camp with some to spare. We might even get a fair price. DETROIT BULL should improve off that last effort. PHARIEN is a steady sort.

Best bet—ABRASION.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARDY, $17.60, $10.00, $7.40; MOLASSES MIBS, $7.80, $5.80; SCARCANTER (entry), $7.90.

BARDY saved ground on rail to take lead at first turn, was under a well-judged ride while setting pace and responded well when shaken up to win under mild punishment. MOLASSES MIBS, off in a tangle, got clear sailing entering backstretch to move nearest leader, held on well, but was not good enough. SCARCANTER was in close quarters early and came with a rush when clear. STREAMER came with a bold rush after being messed about early.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:02. Winner, Mrs. G. Ring's blk. c. (2) by Haste—Jamesville. Trained by H. H. Battle. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:53⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HASTEVILLE, $2.70, $2.40, $2.60; ADROIT, $3.20, $2.90; PROPOSE $6.00.

HASTEVILLE came out in first flight, was allowed to run on own courage from start and drew away from ADROIT while well in hand. ADROIT outrun field out of gate was easily second best, but was no match for winner. PROPOSE moved into contention from outside and closed willingly. CAN TIME moved up gradually and appeared to have stumbled entering stretch.

Daily Double—BARDY and HASTEVILLE Paid $37.50.

THIRD RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32. Winner, W. C. Stroube's ch. f. ARIEL BEAM was not hurried when outrun in first quarter, came to outside in stretch and moved well when urged to be drawing out at the end. VALDINA BIEN disposed of SOUTH DRIVE, took slight lead at eighth pole, but could not resist closing rush of winner. CITY MAN went into contention with a rush soon after start, saved ground but faltered slightly in final eighth. SOUTH DRIVE shot to the front early but tired badly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHERRYDALE, $21.10, $7.40, $5.30; ONE LINK, $4.60, $3.90; STEEL BEAM, $3.40.

CHERRYDALE was hustled to front soon after start, appeared to have been headed at eighth pole and then came under hard urging to hold sway to end. ONE LINK was always nearest leader, fought it out willingly, but was not good enough. STEEL BEAM was always within striking distance, but could not seriously threaten the top pair. PETES BET was shuffled back immediately after start, worked way closer and finished with good courage.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BATH, $7.30, $4.70, $3.20; COTTESMORE, $5.60, $3.30; REDLANDS (entry), $2.60.

BATH, jumping in flawless fashion and under a strong grip for a mile, moved to front when rider pleased and drew out to long lead. He was being pulled up after the final fence. COTTESMORE was allowed to race on own courage while jumping well in first mile, moved around horses thereafter and was going well at the end. He made a bad landing at the ninth fence, but recovered well. REDLANDS was within striking distance for a mile, tried to move with winner but was not good enough. OSSABAW broke sidewards and hit REDLANDS at the start, raced close up when straightened out and then tired in last half.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily, place driving. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:01. Winner, J. B. Belk's ch. f. BLUSTERING sprinted into early lead while well in hand, was under good rating to eighth pole, where she was shaken up, to draw away and win with speed in reserve. SHE DAST was forced to race on outside of GONDALINA throughout and showed a good race. GONDALINA came through on rail to reach contention and then faltered in last sixteenth. PET was never a serious factor while being hard ridden.

Capital Store Sales Up 39% During Week

The upsurge in Washington department store sales continued with no signs of abatement in the week ended April 25, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Sales were 39 per cent higher than the same week last year.

For the four weeks ended April 25, Washington store sales averaged 20 per cent heavier than in the like 1941 period.

Sales in the whole Fifth Federal Reserve District were 26 per cent higher for the week and 15 per cent improved for the four-week period. Baltimore store sales were 14 per cent higher in the week and 10 per cent greater for the four-week peroid.

The Government price-freezing order had little effect on retail trade compared with its expected impact, but brought a decided lull in advance wholesale buying, Dun & Bradstreet reported yesterday.

New orders virtually dried up in some lines, this week's survey showed, while buyers and sellers alike tried to figure out just how the freezing order would affect them. All were hesitant to make long-term commitments, but there were few cancellations of orders already booked.

Reorders for immediate selling were fairly heavy, and later delivery orders in some lines so well maintained as to suggest that the availability of merchandise rather than price was the big concern.

At retail the decline in anticipatory buying continued with fewer lines subject to stock-up demand. Some seasonal items, retailers said, were "back in stride" after a post-Easter letdown.

Aside from those reactions to the price order, retail trade was spotty although as far as could be determined there was little postponement of buying on the chance that some price savings might be made by waiting.

"Despite the rise in retail prices, estimated at more than 15 per cent over last year," the review said, "the increase in total retail volume in the past week was no more than 3 to 5 per cent."

H. H. Reed, general manager of the Insurance Co. of North America, has been named chairman.

Said the new committee in an initial statement:

"Heavy shipping losses the first quarter of this year because of war conditions have been spread among the insurance companies in such a way that they have been absorbed without shock and without materially affecting any individual insurance company or marine companies as a whole."

New York, May 1 (AP).—The steel industry netted 6.2 cents on each sales dollar during 1941 on the biggest volume on record, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today. For 1940, the net was 8.1 cents on the dollar.

Total sales last year were 50 per cent ahead of 1940, the institute said, because of defense and war demands, at $5,260,000,000, compared with $3,489,000,000 and the previous week of $3,800,000,000 in the first World War year of 1918.

Earnings in 1942, the institute said, were expected to drop further.

Survey Finds Women Can Fit Almost All Jobs, Marriage No Bar, Physical Test Important

Women going into war jobs, many of them to sit at factory benches for the first time, are bringing new problems.

The National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., a research organization, has just completed a survey intended to help factory employers pick the right women for the right jobs, in the right way. The report of the survey, ranging from the kind of work women can do and cannot do to their supervision on the jobs, offers these general conculsions of the board or of the employers:

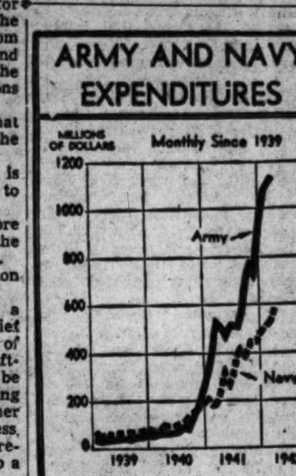

There is hardly an occupation that can be said to be unsuitable for the employment of women.

The mere fact that a woman is married should be no handicap to her getting a war job.

Girls under 30 usually have more energy than older women but the latter are more stable emotionally.

A thorough physical examination of female applicants is important.

The board explains there is a sound physical basis for the belief women cannot do certain kinds of work, such as extremely heavy lifting, but much of this problem can be solved by conveyor systems, lifting trucks, stacking machines and other mechanical equipment. Nevertheless, the amount of lifting women are required to do should be reduced to a minimum.

Women are likely to be more seriously affetced than men by some poisons used in connection with various processes well adapted to women's abilities.

Because their powers of resistance are lower than those of men, generally they do not appear to be well suited for jobs requiring exposure to extreme heat.

Certain jobs which women do particularly well include work requiring care, constant alertness, good eyesight, use of light instruments and work requiring manipulative dexterity and speed, espeically when women can do the job sitting down.

With perhaps 200,000 men going into the Army monthly, estimates by the War Production Board indicate war industries will have to employ approximately 10 million wrokers this year, about one million of them women.

Factory employers do their recruiting from that vast labor force in several ways:

Through the United States Employment Service, through female employes whose friends and relatives may be seeking work, through voluntary applications, schools and colleges and newspaper advertising.

Unless those recruited, according to the board, are carefully chosen and then properly placed, the working force will not be efficient.

The methods of employers in choosing women workers vary.

There seems to be little uniformity in the educational requirements established for what seem to be comparable factory jobs in different establishments.

Some firms require high school graduation, others, completion of grammar school, while others have no prescribed educational standards.

The consensus of the employers interviewed is that under present conditions there is no reason why a married woman should not have equal consideration with her single sisters for a job.

The board says:

"The important factor is not whether a person needs a job, for there are plenty of jobs to go around, but whether conditions in the home are such as to distract from job effectiveness and lead to absenteeism.

"None of the figures kept by any of the concerns visited indicated that the absenteeism of married women was greater, or their effectiveness less, or their turnover higher, than that of single women.

"In fact, the opposite seems more likely to be true, because married women usually take factory jobs only after serious consideration and with the realization that they have to make good if they want to keep them."

A majority of the firms surveyed required a thorough physical examination of its applicants and on this point the board says:

"There seems to be little doubt that if all women, as well as men, are given a thorough physical examination before employment, absenteeism can be reduced and production improved."

Equal Pay for Women Urged by N. A. M. Head

New York, May 1 (AP).—"Equal pay for equal performance by women in war production factories," was recommended today by William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufactureis.

"Women can satisfactorily fill all or most jobs performed by men, subject only to the limitation of strength and physical requirements," Witherow said in a statement.

"Sound employment and personnel practices are applicable to both men and women and no emphasis should be placed on any distinctions as between them as workers."

Adequate Shoe Supplies Seen For Civilians

By the Associated Press

New York, May 1.—Civilians will have adequate shoes for the duration of the war but to conserve leather the number of styles must be reduced drastically, A. G. Spring, War Production Board shoe and leather special advisor, said today at the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association meeting at the Hotel Commodore.

Advising more than 5000 representatives of the shoe manufacturing industry, Spring said:

"There will be no shortage of good, serviceable shoes, for more pairs of shoes were manufactured in the first three months of 1942 than in the same time a year ago when a new record was established.

"But leather must be conserved so the War Labor Board asks that you (shoe manufacturers) reduce the number of styles and save scrap leather. Frugality must be the watchword."

He added that domestic cattle hides for the shoe industry will reach 18,750,000 for this year, approximately one million more than in 1941.

Maj. Joseph W. Byron, chief of the leather and shoe section of the War Production Board, urged that every assistance be given Russia, especially in sole leather.

"A Russian committee interviewed me in Washington last July in quest of leather," he explained. "They told of the terrific shortage in shoes and hides but smugly I said that the American soldier should come first. But as I started to explain, one of the group interrupted me saying: 'Major Byron, after all, our boys are doing the fighting.' They got the leather."

Bond Retirement Mapped by HOLC

The Home Owners Loan Corporation announced yesterday that $875,000,000 of its bonds either will be paid off in cash or refunded into Treasury securities on July 1.

The bonds are the corporation's 2¼ per cent, series G bonds of July 1, 1944.

John H. Fahey, chairman, said the corporation had $300,000,000 available to pay for the bonds and the remaining $575,000,000 would be borrowed from the Treasury, repayable at about $20,000,000 per month out of the regular payments received by the corporation on its home mortgages.

After the retirement or refunding of these bonds, the corporation's outstanding bonds will total about $2,109,000,000.

Arnold Print Works Votes Liquidation

North Adams, Mass., May 1 (AP). Stockholders of Arnold Print Works voted today to dissolve and liquidate the corporation.

They authorized the calling of the company's first mortgage bonds on October 1 and the sale of the concern's assets.

Ultimate payment—subject to final determination of taxes and other contingencies—would amount to about $15 a common share, the management said.

Directors of the company yoted on March 30 to recommend liquidation proceedings to stockholders because of inability to obtain supplies of cloth for conversion into dress goods and draperies.

Profit Taking Cuts Upsurge In Wheat List

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 1.—Wheat prices jumped as much as 2 cents a bushel today following announcement of the loan rate for the new crop but profit taking reduced the gain.

Other grains shared in the revival of buying, corn advancing more than 2 cents, oats a cent, rye 2 cents and soybeans almost 4 cents at one stage.

Wheat closed ⅞-1¼ higher than yesterday. May $1.20⅛-$1.20¼, July $1.23½-$1.23⅝; corn 1⅜-1¾ higher; May 85, July 87⅝-87¾; oats ⅛-¾ up; rye ⅞-1¼ higher and soybeans ¾-2 higher. Lard held at ceilings.

The 1942 loan rate, which will average $1.14 a bushel on the farm, was in line with expectations but the announcement came earlier than many traders had expected. This average will be 16 cents higher than the loan for 1941 wheat while the Chicago basis for No. 2 grades of hard and red winter at $1.32 will be 17 cents higher. No spot wheat sales were made today but quotations posted yesterday were about 13 cents under the 1942 loan rate. July wheat closed more than 8 cents under.

Grain men expect wheat producers to approve the quota tomorrow inasmuch as the loan rates would not be available if an adverse vote was cast.

Buying of rye was associated with announcement of a loan of 60 cents a bushel on farms for the new crop. Short covering was in evidence in all pits, particularly the soybean market.

Ease Rationing Of Cheaper Tires, Industry Urges

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 1.—Tire manufacturers, at a conference here today with OPA officials, urged a liberalization of rationing rules to permit the faster movement of obsolete-size and cheaper grade tires from manufacturers' stocks.

Charles Phillips, assistant tire controller of OPA, said the factories now have 8,000,000 tires in their plants and warehouses—enough for three years' rationing—and commented:

"We don't want these tires to rot any more than you do. But three years from now we want to be able to supply essential needs."

Specifically, the representatives of all manufacturers asked that all tire sizes for cars of 1935 or earlier model be classed as obsolete. Sizes for 18 and 19 inch rims would be in this classification.

Pepsi-Cola Net Up in Quarter

New York, May 1 (AP).—Walter S. Mack, jr., president of the Pepsi-Cola Co., estimated today the concern's consolidated net earnings for the first quarter of the year, before Federal and Canadian taxes, were $2,701,000 compared with $2,027,000 in the like period of 1941.

Mack said that after taxes at the 1941 rate, the net for the March quarter figured at $1,260,000, and that no attempt had been made to estimate taxes under proposals now pending.

The company president said that rationing had slowed down the company's normal sales increase, but pointed out that in Great Britain, "despite the greater shortage of many essential materials," sales during the past year were up 50 per cent.

Long-Lagging Utilities Lead Continued Rise In Stock Market; Blue Chips Are in Demand

New York, May 1.—Utilities and an assortment of blue chips today led the stock market on another selective upturn.

Senior issues advanced as much as 3 points or so on small turnovers after an irregular opening in which fractional minus signs predominated. High marks were reduced in many instances at the close and many industrials and rails ended a shade under water.

Transfers totaled 300,680 shares, compared with 278,620 Thursday. The Associated Press average was up .4 of a point at 33.1, its third successive day's recovery.

The long-lagging utilities, as well as some other lines, seemingly were bought on tax recommendations voted by the House Ways and Means Committee which were interpreted as beneficial to companies with heavy invested capital structures. The power and light corporations generally are in this class. It was questionable, though, if a number of industrial concerns would profit under the proposed tax alterations and shares of these inclined to hang back.

The war news from Burma still was a bearish factor and there were enough doubters of the workability of the price-freezing program to restrain buying in several departments. Analysts, at the same time, thought the market had a chance to get a little farther on the rallying route after its retreat to nine-year lows.

Preferreds in demand included issues of West Penn Electric, American Power & Light, Engineers Public Service, United Corp. and Public Service of N. J.

American Telephone common finished up 1⅞ after posting a loss at the opening. Among others in front were Western Union, Consolidated Edison, North American, American Tobacco "B," Liggett & Myers "B," U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse, Air Reduction, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical and Dow Chemical.

Numerous earnings statements revealed the impact of mounting costs on first quarter net and, while regular and extra dividends were the rule, there was an evident lightening of commitments in stocks of some reporting companies.

On the offside were United States Steel, Bethlehem, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Texas Co., General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Johns-Manville, Cerro de Pasco, United States Gypsum and J. C. Penney.

Laons of the utilities topped other issues in the bond division. Grain futures were aided by the Agriculture Department's boost in the loan average for this year's wheat crop. At Chicago wheat was up ⅞ to 1½ cents a bushel, corn ahead 1⅜ to 1¾ and hogs 10 cents higher. Cotton gained 35 to 50 cents a bale at the last.

Bid up in the Curb were American Gas, American Light & Traction, Columbia Oil & Gas, Gulf Oil, Northern States Power "A" and New Jersey Zinc. Turnover here aggregated 48,608 shares versus 51,275 yesterday.

Basic Loan Rate On Wheat Raised To $1.14 a Bushel

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday its basic loan rate on 1942-grown wheat would be $1.14 a bushel at the farm. The corresponding rate for 1941 wheat was 98 cents.

The loan program is contingent upon grower approval of wheat marketing quotas in a referendum today. The Crop Control Act requires that loans not be made in event the quotas are rejected.

The basic loan rate is the equivalent of 85 per cent of the parity price of wheat, which was $1.335 April 15.

Actual loan rates vary according to grade of the wheat and its place of storage. Rates would be highest at terminal markets and lowest at far-distant points from those markets, reflecting transportation and other costs involved in moving the grain from the farm to the market.

Famed Luncheon Club Closes in Wall Street

New York, May 1 (AP).—Solvent but discouraged, The Rookery, lunch club for some of Wall Street's biggest big shots, announced today it was about to close its doors.

Its membership, limited to an exclusive hundred, was said to have been so depleted by an exodus to the armed forces and other Government service that it was no longer feasible to keep its famed kitchens going.

Defense Housing Must Be Near Job To Get Priorities

Philadelphia, May 1 (AP).—Priorities for housing for war production workers will be granted only for locations within a mile or two of the industrial plants involved, Sullivan Jones, chief of the housing priorities branch of the War Production Board, told members of the Mortgage Bankers Association today.

Proximity of existing utilities also will enter the priority rating of such construction, he said.

Members of the association convened for a two-day conference and clinic to discuss mortgages, property management and the effects of the war on housing.

At the closing session Saturday Dr. Gustav Stopler, New York economist, will address the group on the economic effects of the war.

Hog and Cattle Prices Rally After Long Drop

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—Improved demand from packing interests today halted the week's sharp decline in hog and cattle prices that followed announcement of blanket ceilings on wholesale and retail trade.

A reduction in marketings of hogs, which totaled only 12,000 head, half of which were shipped direct, also strengthened that market. Hogs were strong to 10 cents higher, top returning to $14.15 per hundredweight.

New York Cotton

New York, May 1 (AP).—Cotton futures managed to close at today's best levels of 35 to 50 cents a bale higher after charting an erratic course which depressed prices as much as 50 cents a bale at one time.

Principal demand came from trade and mill orders while strength in grains partly influenced the advance.

Hedge selling against loan repossessions or recent Commodity Credit Corporation. Purchases appeared in heavier volume, but the offerings were well absorbed.

Market to Get $80,000,000 of New Flotations

Underwriting activity was resumed yesterday on a broad scale, in connection with the proposed offerings by five corporations aggregating 80 million dollars. One of the offerings went into registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday, two more are likely to be filed next week, while the remaining two probably will develop later in May.

Bankers also are known to be discussing other important items of corporate financing, both for refunding and new-money purposes. One of the largest of the items reported likely for the early future is extensive financing for Aluminum Co. of America, which contemplates financing of 150 million dollars.

Childs Files Issue

Childs Co. Thursday filed a registration statement with the SEC covering a proposed issue of $4,943,000 debentures due in 15 years, and carrying 5 per cent coupons. This issue is to be offered for a period of 90 days on an exchange basis, to holders of the company's' outstanding 5 per cent debentures, due April 1, 1943.

The indenture provides that Childs Co. will pay the trustee on each April 1 an amount equal to 50 per cent of the consolidated net earnings for the preceding year, and also indicates that no dividends will be paid so long as two million dollars or more of debentures are outstanding.

R. H. Macy & Co. is expected to file with the SEC at the start of next week a registration statement covering a proposed issue of 12 million debentures, due in ten years. Lehman Brothers is to head the underwriting syndicate on this flotation, which has been under discussion for several weeks.

Philip Morris Is Due

Philip Morris & Co., Inc., plans to file a statement next week on $6,500,000 preferred stock. Lehman Brothers and Glore, Forgan & Co. are to head the underwriting syndicate in this financing. The stock issue is to be offered initially to holders of common stock of the company.

Pending clarification of the recapitalization program of Virginia Public Service Co., plans are under consideration for $36,500,000 financing for this utility. The flotation will have to be sold on competitive bids, under ruling U-50 of the SEC, and tenders may be opened late this month.

Three or more syndicates are likely to bid for the issue, which would comprise 26 million dollars of 3¾ per cent 30-year bonds and $10,500,000 debentures due in 15 years, undercurrent plans.

Public Service Gas & Electric Co. expects to place on competitive sale May 25 an issue of 15-million-dollar bonds. Underwriting firms were advised to this effect yesterday, and numerous banking syndicates are being formed to compete for the flotation.

Scrap-Covetous Eyes Cast On Auto Industry's Idle Dies

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 1.—The future of some 60 million dollars worth of dies and tools stored by the automobile industry for the duration of the war became more uncertain than ever today following a meeting of more than 500 industrial salvage engineers with officials of the War Production Board's salvage section.

Because the tools and dies are unsuited to war production work, the car industry crated and indexed each item against the day when car output might be resumed: representatives of the WPB salvage committee think they should be scrapped because of the growing shortage of material.

One industry authority pointed out today that the scrap value of the tools would be only a fraction of their value as operating equipment. For the most part they are made of high-alloy nickel steel, which has been classified as one of the "critical" materials in the war effort.

Scrapping the dies and tools would mean that wholly new models would have to be developed in the postwar period instead of resuming production on the 1942 models, as many of the former car manufacturers expected. It would mean also that from eight months to a year might elapse after the end of the war before any new cars could be made.

Describing the Detroit area as the largest scrap producing center on the country, Edwin B. Barringer, president of the Scrap Iron and Steel Institute, Inc., told the conference here yesterday that "any machine not now operating is not going to—and it will make the highest quality of scrap."

George Weymouth, chief of the WPB industrial salvage section, said scrap is now a "secondary raw material and it is the patriotic duty of every citizen to report hoards of critical materials. You report it and we will move it."

Howard A. Coffin, cochairman of the Detroit salvage committee, reported that in March the Detroit area turned in more than five million pounds of scrap iron and steel, plus 250,000 pounds of alloy metals.

17 EnterDerby; Alsab Rated Third Choice of Devil Diver and Shut Out a 3-1, with Alsab third choice at 4-1.

In recent years, a custom has developed of giving a name to the Derby. This one has been variously called the Question Mark Derby, the Derby of Doubt, etc. I prefer to dub it the Good and Bad Derby. Something good and something bad can be said about every horse in the field.

Requested was good in the Wood Memorial and bad in the Chesapeake Stakes. Alsab was good last year and horrid this year. Devil Diver has worked good but may be bad at a mile and a quarter. Shut Out was good early last year but went to the bad. Sun Again was a good second in the Derby trial but may be "short" tomorrow and that's bad. Sweep Singer closed good at Havre de Grace but has beaten only bad horses.

But regardless of the field, the Kentucky Derby continues to be No. 1 on the turf parade. Despite the fact that Louisville, in wartime, seems to lack some of the zip of former years, they should be packing them in at Churchill Downs tomorrow afternoon. The scribes will estimate the crowd anywhere from 70,000 to 100,000 and the right figure will be somewhere in between.

Despite the fact the field contains no less than five horses with track marks to their credit, the consensus of opinion is that Whirlaway's record of 2:01 2-5 set last year will not be broken. In clipping the previous mark held by Twenty Grand, Whirlaway ran his last quarter in 24 seconds and so far there hasn't been a horse of that caliber shown.

For the most part, trainer and jockeys are confident. George Woolf, the country's leading "money rider," has faith in Hollywood, the only imported horse in the field. If riding alone decided the Derby Woolf would be an odds on favorite despite the fact that Eddie Arcaro will be aboard Devil Diver. Basil James, in the Kentucky Hotel lobby this evening, said he still liked his mount, Alsab. Leon Haas, who flew in from Maryland, smiles because he will be astride Requested while Charlie Bierman, who upset them all with Gallahadion, remarked, "I did it before and I'll do it again." He boots Valdina Orphan tomorrow.

Trainer Ben Jones is the only conditioner among those with "leading contenders" who isn't enthusiastic. He will saddle or scratch Sun Again. He maintains the colt is not "tight" enough. But most of his friends are discounting this because Jones was far from an optimist about Whirlaway's chances on Derby eve a year ago.

Should all 17 named overnight compete tomorrow, the winner's portion will be $65,225, the largest purse ever contested for by 3-year-olds in this country.

As is usual, long shots were the first to be entered when the box was opened this morning. H. S. Cuttriss, a stable agent, came into the secretary's office shortly after 7 a. m. and put in slips for the Milky Way Farm's Dogpatch and Mrs. Barcay Douglas' Fair Call, representing the Mill River Stable. A few minutes later the Greentree pair of Devil Diver and Shut Out were officially in the race with an agent filling out the blanks.

The first trainer to appear with his own entry was Lex Wilson. He smiled as he wrote in the name of Sweep Swinger and in the jockey space he spelled out "A. Shelhamer." Wilson said, "Mud or fast won't mean a thing to us. We've been waiting for a long time to take a crack at these other 3-year-olds at a mile and a quarter. Now we have it."

I'm going to string along with Wilson and his Sweep Swinger. I can't forget that closing move this one made in the Chesapeake Stakes. With the field alive with speed horses, I believe there's going to be plenty of weary ones in the stretch. In looking for the winner, I want a "catcher" and that one looks like Sweep Swinger. I'll take Requested to place and Shut Out to show. But may the best horse win.

Newsom Will Seek To Halt Cleveland Win Streak Today

Buck Newsom today gets the task of stopping the Indians' 12-game winning streak. Bib Bobo, winner over Chicago in his last start, will be attempting to win his third game of the season.

Until he joined the Tigers in 1939, Newsom was notoriously unable to beat the Cleveland club, but during the past three seasons he has been a consistent winner over the Indians.

Manager Lou Boudreau was indefinite last night on his choice of pitchers today, wavering between Left-handed Al Smith and Jim Bagby, who has won three straight. He leaned toward Smith. The game will complete the two-game series between the two clubs.

Tribe Records 12th Straight, Beats Nats,13-6

Carrasquel was the victim of that assault which contained five hits, one of which was a single.

Mel Harder went the route for the Indians. He gave up 12 hits but after the third inning he was working with a mounting lead. He held the Nats to two runs in the last seven innings.

Those four Cleveland runs in the first inning were the horrible contributions of two of Bucky Harris' rookies, Kennedy and Alex Kvasnak, the latter replacing the injured George Case in left field. Kvasnak didn't last much longer than Kennedy in the Washington lineup and was replaced by Ortiz after losing a fly ball in the sun.

Kennedy walked the first two batters of the ball game without throwing a strike of any description, and when Keltner beat out a bunt to Estalella, the Indians filled the bases with none out. Heath drove in two runs with a single to right, and Kennedy took the long walk back to the showers.

Walter Masterson got the pitching job and after Mills moved runners to second and third with a sacrifice, he purposely passed Fleming to fill the bases. Mack lifted a long high fly to left field and Kvasnak held a pose while looking into the sun. The ball thudded to earth a few feet to his left and two runs scored. Masterson then took matters into his own hand and limited the damage to four runs by striking out DeSautels and Harder.

The Nats got two runs back immediately on Spence's double, Vernon's triple to center and Campbell's single to right. All of a sudden in the second, they tied the score with two out. Pofahl beat out a bunt and Ortiz swatted a pitch into the left field stands for a homer.

Masterson let the tie get out of hand with two out in the third when he pitched a double to Fleming and a single to Mack, and in the fourth, the Indians slugged him for five more.

Bodreau doubled to left in that fourth and Hockett bettered that feat with a triple to center. Keltner followed with a double to left, Mills conked a single to left, and with three runs already across, Fleming pumped a pitch over the right-field wall for the fourth and fifth runs of the inning. Nothing was very important after that blow, which upped the Indians' lead to 10 to 4.

Case's absence from the Nats' line-up is due to a lame left shoulder suffered while sliding into third in Thursday's game . . . Bucky Harris entrusted Kvasnak with the sun-field job, but only for one inning . . . after Kvasnak lost the only ball hit in that direction, Harris moved Ortiz into the Nats' outfield, and transferred the veteran, Bruce Campbell, to left field . . . Stan Spence collected three of the Nats' hits and moved into the .406 class . . . he also achieved his twentieth run batted in . . . Bobby Estalella hasn't made a hit since he rejoined the line-up after being beaned, and his average has shrunk to .288 . . . Jake Early, however, is in the prize slump, hitting a mere .180 . . . Those home-runs by Ortiz and Fleming yesterday barely climbed over the barriers in left and right, respectively.

Cards Defeat Braves in 10th On Home Run

St. Louis, May 1.—Ken O'Dea's tenth-inning home run abruptly ended the Boston Braves' winning streak at five games today, and gave the St. Louis Cardinals an 8 to 7 decision over the Eastern club.

The Braves staged a five-run rally in the sixth, to move ahead 7 to 4, but the Cards kept whittling away at the lead and tied the score in the ninth when Stan Musial cracked a home run with a mate on base, his second of the game.

Willard Donovan was the victim of Musial's ninth-inning blow, and Johnny Sain pitched the game-winning home run ball to O'Dea, and was charged with the loss.

"Labor News Review," the weekly local program of WJSV, Columbia's Washington outlet, now is rebroadcast throughout England through an arrangement made by the British Embassy in Washington with Albert N. Dennis the producer and star of that perennial series.

The program, selected by the Embassy as "the most desirable summary of trends and events affecting American labor, industry and related economies," is, according to an Embassy spokesman, "the only local American radio program so requested for use in England."

The scripts are transmitted to England through the British Press Service, after clearance by the United States Office of the Censor.

"Labor News Review," originated in 1934 by Albert N. Dennis, writer, editor and now senior member of WJSV's news staff, is a interpretive review of trends and events as they affect labor and industry. Its facts are supplied from news sources developed by Dennis in his 29 years of labor news analysis. The program has received many awards for its public service and claims a wide audience among Government and business executives in the Nation's Capital.

Although many news stories of national and international interest have been "broken" on the program, it has yet to pay the $5 award reserved for anyone reporting an error in fact.

"Labor News Review" is heard Saturdays from 6:30 to 6:45 p. m., EWT.

Contract Bridge

A diamond slam is presented by G. M. B., of Easton, Md. This slam looked easy, but failed, even though good play was used. Here are the cards:

	♠ 10 ♡ A Q J 3 ◇ K Q J 8 3 ♣ A Q J
♠ A Q J 9 8 ♡ K 4 ◇ 10 4 2 ♣ K 7 5	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH

North opened a low spade.

"Of course, the contract looks cold," writes our contributor, "so West went up with dummy's ace (the finesse would have won, but it would have been the height of folly to take it) and started to knock out the diamond ace by leading low to his jack. North's discard of a heart told the bad news. Now the diamond ace cannot be attacked, for South will play it only when dummy's ten is played and then will set up a long trump by forcing in spades.

"West saw only one chance and played for it. Can your players see what West saw?

"West had to hope that South's distribution was 2-3-5-3 (suits in order)."

G. M. B. means declarer had to hope South held three hearts and three clubs along with the five diamonds, which would leave him with only two spades.

"He (West) can then cash three clubs," continues the contributor, "enter dummy with the heart king, ruff a spade (looks queer that he must shorten his trumps himself, but it is essential), cash two more hearts and trump his last heart with the ten. South is then helpless and can win only his ace, then or later.

"I am sorry the story has not a happy ending. South's distribution was 4-1-5-3 (four spades and a singleton heart). West had only the consolation of thinking he had made his best try."

Women Voters Back Roosevelt's Policies on War

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—The National League of Women Voters adjourned its fifteenth convention today with adoption of a wartime program in support of President Roosevelt's policies for prosecuting the conflict, cures on inflation and work to establish a just post-war world organization.

In addition, delegates passed resolutions to promote the election of capable Congressmen and to concentrate the league's efforts on relating local government to the necessities of wartime in a "vigorous summer campaign."

The league reelected Miss Marguerite M. Wells of Minneapolis to her fifth two-year term as head of the organization.

Mrs. R. T. H. Halsey of New Haven, Conn., was named secretary. The other officers were reelected. Mrs. D. Bailey Calvin of La Marque, Tex., former secretary, was named to the board of directors, with Mrs. Marion A. Cheek, jr., Snyder, N.
